To Take More Than Crisis For Congress Call

President Irked By Failure To Act On Neutrality

HYDE PARK, July 21.—President Roosevelt contended at a press conference today that a decision to defer action on neutrality legislation until the next congressional session would hurt business.

A prominent businessman, Mr. Roosevelt said, told him recently that failure of congress to act on neutrality was killing the nicest little business boom you ever saw.

Businessmen, the President asserted, do not want to make commitments because they do not know what form neutrality legislation may take when congress convenes next year. They do not want to place orders or take them, he said.

For instance, he said, a newspaper owner, not knowing how a war might affect his business, would hesitate to place an order for a new press. At the same time, the President said it would take more than a mere crisis to impel him to call congress into a special session to come to grips with the neutrality problem.

For several years, he added, there have been recurring threats which did not eventuate in war abroad, and there might be another which might not lead to actual conflict.

But the United States is not in a position to help in a situation of that kind, he said, under the present neutrality law with its arms embargo provision. Members of the senate who conferred with him and Secretary Hull Tuesday night were fully apprised of that face, he said.

It was at that conference that a decision was reached to abandon efforts to obtain immediate passage of a neutrality bill without an arms embargo section.

Members of the senate who wanted to postpone action, Mr. Roosevelt declared, have been gambling with the possibility that war will not eventuate.

The chief executive indicated that the neutrality controversy was closed until congress reassembles next January, so far as he was concerned. Then he went on to discuss it at length with newsmen clustered around his

Longwood Man Is Bruised By Auto

Carl Davis of Longwood, received a bruised elbow and several scratches Thursday night when he was knocked down by a car driven by Leon Benedict, 416 East Walnut street, at the intersection of Main and Kentucky.

Davis, who is about 50 years old, was treated by a doctor at the police station last night. Benedict said that Davis walked in front of his car from behind another automobile, and that he did not see him.

Roscoe Carver Injured In Car-Truck Crash

Rushed To Hospital After Taken From Wrecked Truck

Roscoe Carver, 17 years old, star athlete of the Smith-Cotton high school, who this summer has been driving a delivery truck for the Cramer Grocery, Thirteenth street and Montgomery avenue, was seriously injured this morning, in an automobile accident.

Carver was driving the truck south on Montgomery avenue, when a Chevrolet sedan driven by George Burnett, R F D 3 headed west on Fifteenth street, and the truck collided at the intersection of Fifteenth street and Montgomery avenue, about 9:30 o'clock.

The truck overturned three times and stopped lying on its side, with Carver pinned between the steering wheel and the seat. Neighbors rushed to the scene and lifted the truck back on its wheels and removed Carver.

He was rushed to the Bothwell hospital in the McLaughlin ambulance, where it was revealed he suffered from a concussion, a laceration on his forehead and bruises about the head. No bones were broken, it was said.

Accompanying Mr. Burnett was his wife, who received a laceration on her right forehead, and bruises. Also accompanying the Burnetts was Mrs. M. F. Thomas, also of R. F. D. 3, who was not injured.

Prosecute Egg Law Violators

John E. Clary, chief inspector of the State Department of Agriculture, is making a check-up on the egg buyers in and around Sedalia.

Chief Clary states there has been more complaints sent to the department on the egg law violations in the Sedalia trade territory than any territory in the state, and he is here to prosecute any and all violators, whether they be grocery stores, poultry dealers, or anyone buying and handling eggs, be they large or small.

The law requires that all eggs purchased be carefully candled, and all eggs found to be unfit for human consumption, be deducted. A candling certificate is required to be placed in each and every case.

"The time has come for a show down on the egg law of this state, and all violators are going to have to pay the penalty," said Mr. Clary. "There is no way to improve the quality of eggs produced in Missouri, and return more money to the producer until every dealer complies strictly with the law, and it is the intention of the State Department of Agriculture to see that this is done," he declares.

Mr. Clary states he intends to make frequent calls, or remain in this territory until a disgraceful practice in the egg industry is corrected and the law complied with in full.

Note Declares Pastor Held By Arabs Is Safe

Donkey Boy Carries Urge Ransom Be Paid During Day

JERUSALEM, July 21—(AP)—A donkey boy brought to Jerusalem today a note from the Rev. Gerould R. Goldner of Mogodore, O., assuring his father of his safety but urging that the $5,000 ransom demanded by his Arab kidnapers be paid today if possible.

The same messenger brought a note from the leader of the band which kidnaped the Ohio pastor Wednesday declaring that if the ransom were not paid the captors would not be responsible for Goldner's safety.

The first message, delivered to Dr. Jacob Goldner, Cleveland, O., pastor and father of the kidnaped man, said:

"Don't worry. I am sending this note with my donkey boy to you to convince you I am safe. Please bring the money, if possible, Friday. Affectionately, Jerry (Gerould)."

Two donkey boys accompanied the Goldners on the journey which resulted in the kidnaping. One was sent back with the father, who reached Jerusalem yesterday. The second was freed last night with the messages and reached Jerusalem this morning.

He was questioned intensively by British authorities and by the elder Goldner.

Meanwhile the father of the 29-year-old kidnap victim prayed for the release of his son. United States Consul-General George Wadsworth continued efforts to free the younger Goldner.

Arab intermediaries also took a hand in the negotiations. They were understood to have countered the kidnapers' original demand for $5,000 — repeated in the gang leader's note today — with an offer of $1,000.

It was understood three main Arab tribes in the Dead sea vicinity had been approached to assist Wadsworth in the search for the clergyman and his captors.

One of the chief sheiks of the area promised to do what he could to negotiate Goldner's release.

The elder Goldner was taken by the Arabs also but released and escorted to the outskirts of Jerusalem yesterday by two of the kidnap band after he had been told his son would be held until the ransom was paid.

The kidnaping occurred Wednesday as the father and son, on a Holy Land tour, were returning from a trip by donkey to a monas-

Missourians In Movieland Visit

HOLLYWOOD, July 21.—Missourians took over movieland today.

Studio gates, normally tightly closed against tourists, opened for Governod Lloyd C. Stark and his entourage, en route home from the San Francisco Exposition.

At Warners' studio, Executive Jack L. Warner asked Stark jokingly if he would like a contract.

"No," replied Stark. "I've got one now—with the State of Missouri."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was host to the governor's party today. The "show me" delegation planned to entrain homeward late today.

Foe Of Wagner Act Considered

Rep. Smith Likely Be Chairman In Inquiry Ordered

WASHINGTON, July 21—(AP)—With a critic of the Wagner Act as its probable chairman, a special committee of five house members will begin a far-reaching investigation into activities of the national labor relations board shortly after congress adjourns.

The investigation was ordered yesterday by a house vote of 254 to 134. An almost solid Republican delegation joined a sizeable Democratic bloc in overriding pleas of labor committee members to await consideration of Wagner Act amendments.

If house precedent is followed, the investigating group will be headed by Representative Smith (D-Va), who sponsored the resolution and who voted against the Wagner Act. Speaker Bankhead will appoint the committee members.

The committee will have full subpoena powers. The house directed it to find out whether the labor board has been fair in its interpretation of the Wagner Act

Runaway Boys Picked Up Here

Two runaway boys, Milo Hill and Milo Dingman, of Leon, Iowa, were surprised this afternoon about 2:15 o'clock when Officer George Maness acting upon a tip they had been seen in Sedalia, approached them in front of 305 West Main street, and took them in custody.

Last Wednesday the police received a report the boys were headed for Sedalia and the bus stations checked, but they failed to arrive, at the said time. Several reports had been received by the police they were here and each time the boys suspicioned happened to be Sedalians.

This afternoon about 2:10 o'clock a report was made to the police and Maness who is desk sergeant, left the station and went over on Main street. Being dressed in civilian clothes, they did not suspicion him being an officer until he was upon them.

One carried a pistol and the other a long knife. They were taken to police headquarters and are being held until word can be received from Deputy Sheriff Kendall of Leon.

Both organizations will then hold separate meetings and elect district officers for the coming year.

Trying To Save Long Machine

Long and Maestri Unite In Effort To Avert Wreckage

NEW ORLEANS, July 21.—(AP)—Governor Earl K. Long and Mayor Robert S. Maestri of New Orleans were united today in an effort to save the old Huey Long political machine from wreckage.

Earl, brother of the late "Kingfish," and Maestri, Huey's early financial backer, are the two remaining of the four principal heirs of Huey's formerly well-ordered domain. Governor Richard W. Leche, titular chief legatte, has resigned, and Seymour Weiss, sometimes called No. 2 political man in Louisiana. is under federal mail fraud charges.

Long yesterday speaking in North Louisiana decried Shreveport and Monroe newspaper attacks on Maestri.

"They branded the fairest and squarest man in the state as an oil crook," Long said. "He is 100 per cent honest. They've decided the only way to get Earl Long is to ruin Bob Maestri. He's given more constructive work as mayor of New Orleans in three years than anyone else ever gave in 40 years."

Maestri, in New Orleans, said he was interested in "a number of oil ventures" but that all his activities "were done legally and honestly."

Long, with the backing of Maestri, is a candidate for governor in the January 1940 Democratic primary. Maestri is head of the powerful political organization Huey welded in New Orleans.

Earl, is seeking to weld the fragments of the political mechine, is promising thorough reform in state government. He repledged himself in his address at Homer yesterday to "clean up graft and corruption."

Meantime, the federal grand jury here and the East Baton Rouge Parish grand jury in Baton Rouge continued their inquiries into charges of governmental irregularities, particularly involving Louisiana State University.

Occupying attention at the inquiry in Baton Rogue was the L. S. U. athletic department. which boomed after Huey long took a hand in its affairs nine years ago.

Called before the jury was T. P. (Red) Heard, athletic director, who brought along record books.

As three special attorneys L. S. U. hired to represent it made plans to recover any money which may have been illegally taken from the school, reports spread that oil might soon be spouting from the campus.

A producing well was brought in yesterday only a short distance from a well being drilled on campus property and experts expressed the belief there was virtual certainty production would be secured for L. S. U.

Arrest Man For Hickory Sheriff

George Fox, about 50, who lives at Twentieth street and Harrison avenue, was arrested by the local police Thursday night for Sheriff Charlie Benedict of Hickory County on charges of giving several bad checks in that territory.

Sheriff Benedict, who came to return Fox to Hermitage, the county seat, said that Fox had been representing himself as an employee of Harris Cohen, a junk dealer here.

Fox would buy some junk and give a check for the amount with the name of Cohen signed to the check according to the officer.

Under the name he would write "by George Fox," the sheriff said.

Cohen told local police that Fox had not worked for him for some time.

New Invitation For Return To Appeasement

Hitler Anxious To Get Danzig And Avoid Strife

LONDON, July 21—(AP)—Pacific utterances in Berlin over the free city of Danzig were interpreted today in Britain as a new invitation to the British government to return to the policy of appeasement.

(A German government spokesman said "our fuehrer is 100 per cent for peace. Now as before we expect an uncompromising solution of the Danzig situation along peaceful lines" favorable to Germany.)

"Nobody ever doubted that Hitler would prefer to get Danzig without war," one British official said, "but as long as Germany insists that Danzig must return to the reich then the situation is not too hopeful."

In Rome, Fascists said they concurred wholeheartedly in the German spokesman's statement. In Paris, officials were guarded in their comment but said they were inclined to regard the statement as a "possible change" in the situation."

The Berlin development came as talk which was without confirmation spread concerning overtures toward European "peace" discussions.

One report was that Sir Nevile Henderson, British ambassador to Germany, might "very shortly" establish contact with Adolf Hitler "to find out just what his terms are for world peace."

The general feeling in Whitehall was that the Berlin statement was Germany's answer to Prime Minister Chamberlain's remark of July 10 that the Danzig situation was "capable of improvement."

Though the official view here is that Danzig's present status is not perfect, officials insist that it is "neither unjust nor illogical" and they support the Polish contention that Germany must not be allowed to "strangle" Poland by controlling Polish access to the sea.

Chamberlain laid down the basis of British policy toward Danzig July 10 in which he did not rule out the possibility of Polish-German negotiation over Danzig.

Might Recover By Civil Suits

KANSAS CITY, July 21.—(AP)—A legal opinion that much of the $6,000,000 which passed through the city manager's emergency fund during H. F. McElroy's rule at the city hall might be recovered by law suits was announced today.

The legal committee of the Forward Kansas City Committee said operation of the fund violated city charter provisions and "every payment into and out of the fund was illegal."

The group did not say the city can recover all the money, but it asserted any person who was a party to any of the transactions acted at his peril and will have to prove the city was not damaged.

After weeks of study the report was made by the committee headed by Paul V. Barnett and suggests a course of action to City Counselor Sam C. Blair.

Bill Passed On Politics Ban In Relief Work

House Sanctions Hatch Measure By 187 To 103 Vote

WASHINGTON, July 21—(AP)—The senate approved today minor house changes in the Hatch bill prohibiting political activities by government employes and sent the measure to the white house.

The action came after an impassioned plea by Senator Hatch (D-NM), author of the legislation, for the senate to send the bill to the president's desk rather than to a joint senate-house conference committee.

Hatch said the latter course would mean the "graveyard" for the legislation.

To his colleagues he asserted vehemently that he had heard reports that a movement was underway to sidetrack the bill and that send it to a conference committee instead of approving the house amendments promptly would have that effect.

WASHINGTON, July 21—(AP)—The House passed the Hatch bill last night after a bi-partisan coalition had scored victories in what they called their effort to restore the teeth to the measure banning "politics in relief" and barring federal employes from political campaigns.

During a long-drawn struggle, the determined coalition of Republicans and Democrats restored many provisions which were in the measure as it passed the senate weeks ago but which were later stricken out by the House judiciary committee after President Roosevelt had objected that the measure was badly drawn.

Led by Rep. Dempsey (D.-N.-M.), the coalition got the house to approve a provision forbidding a vast army of federal officeholders

GOP Forces Try To Scrap Most Of The Program

WASHINGTON, July 21—(AP)—The senate banking committee trimmed $400,000,000 from President Roosevelt's $2,800,000,000 lending program today and then added $90,000,000 for reclamation projects in the west.

Senator Taft (R-Ohio), voicing the views of minority committee members, told reporters Republicans still were "not satisfied" and would seek further curtailment of the measure.

The committee agreed to cut from $750,000,000 to $500,000,000 a proposed authorization for toll roads and from $500,000,000 to $30,000,000 the total which the reconstruction finance corporation could expend for railroad equipment to be leased to the carriers.

While the senate committee was busy with details of the legislation, Jesse Jones, new federal loan administrator, told the house banking committee that any inference drawn from previous testimony by him, and current in some congressional circles, that the lending legislation was unnecessary was "of course, ridiculous."

Jones was reported authoritatively to have told the senate committee late yesterday that the reconstruction finance corporation could finance the program for two years with its present borrowing authority but that some amendments to existing law would be necessary to carry out such lending proposals as construction of toll roads and leasing of equipment to railroads.

Today he told the house committee that the $1,361,000,000 still available to the RFC for loans of all types "can't and won't" take care of the proposed new program. He said the RFC did not have adequate authority to make the types of loans contemplated.

The senate committee's action effected a net reduction of $310,000,000 in the lending program. In addition, the banking group amended the bill to cut from 40 to 30 years the term of bonds which the RFC would issue to raise funds for the program.

It also approved a change to make clear that the rural electrification lending program would aggregate only $500,000,000.

Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky), author of the lending bill said that the changes in language might make it necessary to draft an entirely new measure.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—(AP)—Republican senators contended today that Jesse H. Jones, the federal loan administrator, had provided new material for their drive to scrap most of President Roosevelt's $2,800,000,000 lending program.

Jones was reported authoritatively to have told a closed session of the senate banking committee late yesterday that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation could finance the program for two

May Examine Income Returns

JEFFERSON CITY, July 21—(AP)—The attorney general's office held today that individual state income tax returns could be examined by any grand jury or other body investigating possible tax evasions.

The opinion, written by Covell R. Hewitt, an assistant attorney general, was requested by state auditor Forrest Smith who this week authorized his Jackson county deputy to submit the state returns of T. J. Pendergast, R. E. O'Malley and others to a grand jury there.

In asking for the ruling Smith said it was his opinion the state auditor had no authority to release income tax returns whose secrecy is protected by state law. Hewitt held, however, the returns could be successfully subpoenaed by a grand jury.

Former Leader Of Mobs For Moral Rearmament

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—A man of small stature stood before massed thousands in an auditorium here last night and told of leading "wild mobs" that "broke thousands of dollars of windows night after night" in London.

He was Bill Rowell, British labor leader, representing London's 420,000 unemployed. He spoke to an audience gathered to learn something about moral rearmament—a new movement which has for its goal international peace and peace between employers and employes.

Rowell told how he watched men grow gaunt and holloweyed; children starve and babies die of hunger and disease in squalid cellars. His soul grew bitter. He began a blind, raging fight against what he thought was the forces oppressing the common people.

"Yes, it was I who organized the most powerful forces in England," he shouted. "It was I who led hunger march after hunger march. It was I who led the wild mobs that broke thousands of dollars of windows night after night.

"Then a man, a man whom I recognized as coming from the class of society I despised, came to my house. He was Miles Fillimore, son of a nobleman.

"He came to my house and said: "I'm sorry I belong to the class which has been so largely responsible for the plight of your people. Now I want to do something for you."

"Helped Class Against Class"

"That kind of talk I had never heard before. It startled me and I began to think things over. I saw that my leadership was wrong. I saw that I was helping class against class.

"I saw that the same thing was happening all over the world—nation against nation, class against class, labor against capital—man against man, brother against brother.

"Miles Fillimore stayed at my house for two weeks. I couldn't even give him a bed. He slept in a chair. But he brought moral rearmament to me.

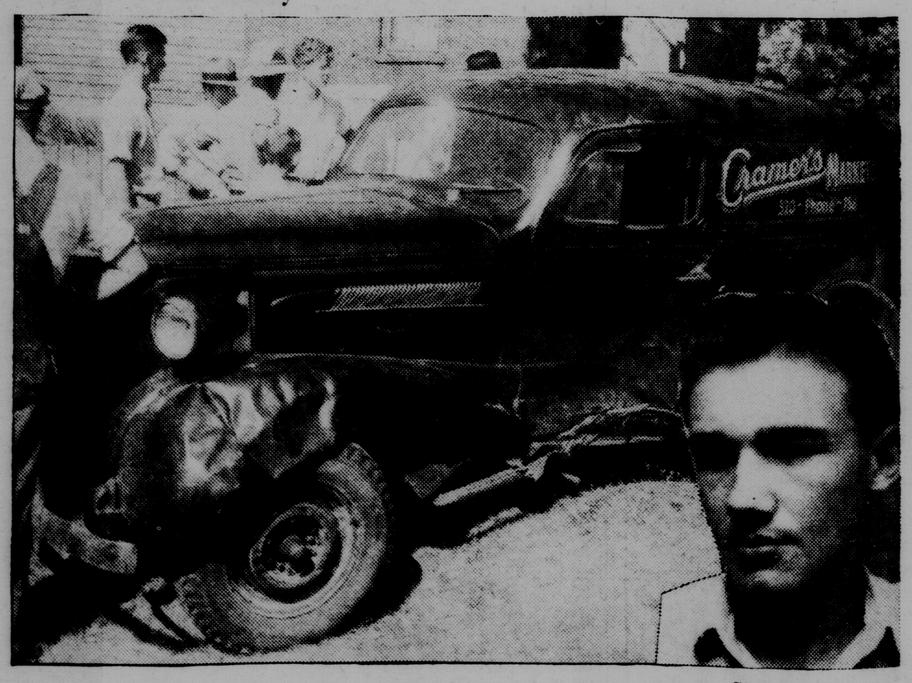

"I in turn imbedded it in the minds of my followers, and we practiced it. It spread like wildfire throughout the district until six months later it was absolutely in control of 47 boroughs on the outskirts of London.

"Parliament became interested and asked us to speak there. We did and that night 23 members of parliament dedicated the rest of their lives to moral rearmament."

Today Rowell and others with him go to Del Monte to attend the second world assembly for moral rearmament. Their goal is worldwide inculcation of:

Absolute honesty.
Absolute love.
Absolute purity.
Absolute unselfishness.

Insurance Farm Ownership Still A Problem

It is now about six or seven years since the great deluge of insurance company foreclosures descended on the farm belt. The situation was a critical problem then, and it is a somewhat less critical but none the less real problem now.

But it is a different problem. One of the curious aspects of it is this: the insurance companies, pitchforked into widespread farm ownership against their will, are now somewhat reluctant to get out. The reason is simple: they have found that their large farm holdings are a sound asset, and almost the only one they can hold that provides any security against possible inflation.

So now insurance commissioners in various midwestern states, engaged in trying gradually to wean farm property away from the insurance companies, are meeting resistance.

Many of these states, the Wall Street Journal points out in surveying the situation, have statutes limiting the length of time insurance companies may own farm property in those states. Such laws have seldom been enforced, and there is reluctance to enforce them too drastically at any one time, lest the dumping of many farms on the market at once break down land values.

Further, the insurance companies are good and prompt taxpayers, and county treasurers are wary of getting too many farms suddenly backs into the hands of those who may or may not be able to pay taxes.

But on the other hand, of course, there is pressure in every such state to reduce farm tenancy, and one of the most easily available ways is to get those farms out of the hands of the insurance companies and back into the hands of farmers. In one state it was found that 15 per cent of all farms were in the hands of insurance companies, an unhealthy situation in a country which aims at the widest possible personal ownership of land by those who use it.

The problem now is, gradually and without disturbing unduly the land market, to get these institutional-owned farms back into the hands of men who will personally till them.

Insurance companies will then have the problem of what to do with the money received for them, investing it in a market which offers all too little chance for new investment.

But that is tomorrow's problem. Today's is the graceful easing out of the farm-ownership problem which arose in the depths of the depression in 1931-1933.

A Tennessean asked "$33 a foot" damages of man who allegedly cut part of his beard. Saved waiting at the barber shop, and now he wants to be paid for it.

Japanese barred a troupe of American chorus girls from entering the nation. The war lords were probably afraid they'd get their mind off war.

A New York apartment dweller says he often meets a well-known bridge expert walking unclad in the halls. Could it be that bridge experts write bridge—and play poker?

An English woman claims to have one of the world's oldest hens—17 years. Likely explanation is that the family kept putting off killing her because they waited for her to get fatter, and now she's too tough to eat.

Our Dirty Streets

We Americans are a free people. We are so free that we are often a nuisance to ourselves.

Take the matter of clean streets. American cities are dirtier than any of the great European cities, dirtier than most of the major cities of South America.

It is not so much because our street-cleaning systems are inferior. It is simply because most free Americans interpret as part of that freedom the right to stroll down the streets scattering refuse gaily and thoughtlessly as they go. That empty cigaret package, that banana skin, the discarded newspaper or package paper—off they go, out of speeding cars and into the street. Who cares? The city will clean it up.

In New York, 110,000 school children are being taught to fight this attitude; police arrested 22,402 chronic violators of anti-litter laws after warnings, the American Public Works Association reports.

But the basic responsibility is on every citizen. Those who think, and those who care, will not litter up the streets in the first place.

Something To Celebrate

Next year will be the 500th anniversary of printing.

The American Institute of Graphic Arts is preparing to celebrate this event, one of the most momentous in the history of man. It is also approximately 400 years since the introduction of printing to the New World, and about 300 since the printing of the first book in what is now the United States.

Libraries, schools, newspaper, book, and periodical publishers are all planning to join in observing the anniversary.

That is proper, for it was printing from movable type that first brought learning within reach of the common man. Perhaps this will some day be regarded as his greatest victory. It is one he will do well not to throw away lightly by cultivating the ear so exclusively that the eye forgets the permanence, the beauty of the printed word.

It is a gift whose precious glint has become slightly tarnished by familiarity. If the institute can do anything to refurbish it in our minds, it will have served us all.

A horse belonging to Joseph Rowe, the second hand dealer, became frightened this morning, and ran from the water trough on Kentucky, upsetting the buggy it was pulling, then with the buggy dragging, the horse ran into the livery barn on Kentucky, turned around, and on its way out collided with Messerly's delivery wagon, knocking it over. No one was hurt in the runaway's mad flight, but the buggy was badly damaged.

• The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON —Joe Kennedy has been a popular and able ambassador to Great Britain, but State Department diplomats are guffawing up their sleeves over the diplomatic antics of his son in Spain.

The incident, hushed up for a long time, began when Joseph Patrick Kennedy, Jr., went to Marseilles to board a British destroyer for Spain. Why he wanted to go there no one has ever explained, and a lot of people on the Loyalist side are suspicious. Also suspicious was the commander of a British destroyer who at first refused to take him aboard. It required a long distance phone call from Ambassador Bullitt in Paris finally to break down the suspicions.

When young Joe arrived in Gandia, just south of Valencia, he was met by an American vice-consul who asked if he had any papers.

"Yes," replied the embryo diplomat, "I have both Loyalist and Franco passports."

"Good night, let me have the Franco passport," replied the consul, for they were in Loyalist territory.

"Masterful Diplomat"

Young Joe then went to Madrid, also in Loyalist territory, where he consorted entirely with Franco sympathizers and would have been arrested by the Loyalists had he not been the son of an American ambassador. Loyalists have since accused Young Joe with arranging the Casada coup by which the downfall of Madrid was hastened.

However, the most that he seems to have done was make life miserable for the caretaker of the American embassy by complaining that he didn't get enough to eat.

Young Joe sent several reports to his father in London, which Joe, Senior, showed to Prime Minister Chamberlain, causing that gentleman to exclaim: "Masterful diplomatic reporting!"

The climax of young Kennedy's visit came after the victory of Franco, when he started for the border, acting as courier for the American diplomat pouch. As a Franco sympathizer, presumably he was travelling among friends.

But when he got to the border, the diplomatic pouch was taken from him and Joe was arrested on the ground of having some drawings in his possession. It mattered not to the Franco authorities that these were very simple works of art. Young Joe was held for some time before the pouch finally was returned.

And he was only released after his clothes were taken off and lemon juice was rubbed on his epidermis to see whether invisible ink messages were written thereon.

Roosevelt Humor

Before White House Secretary Steve Early left for a Pan American Clipper flight to Europe, the President called him in and said solemnly:

"Steve, I want you to take out a $100,000 insurance policy and be sure to have it made out to me. Also have Jimmy write the policy."

Wage Hour Dilemma

Only a few insiders are aware of it, but one of the toughest problems facing the New Deal right now is saving its year-old Wage-Hour Act from the virtual junk pile.

The labor measure is up against a tough situation.

From one side it is being harpooned by such die-hards as Representative Gene Cox of Georgia, bent upon gutting the law with emasculating amendments. From the other side, officials of the Wage-Hour Administration privately have informed Roosevelt that enforcement has practically broken down and unless additional funds are immediately furnished, the act will be little more than a scrap of paper.

They have told Roosevelt that violations are rampant all over the country and that in many sections the law is even flouted openly.

Here are a few examples they reported: A Mississippi Chamber of Commerce informed local employers to disregard the act "because the Wage-Hour Administration hasn't got enough inspectors to check up on you." Alabama lumbermen are paying 10 and 15 cents an hour wages and making no attempt to hide the fact. A Tennessee mill owner discharged three workers for demanding legal minimum wage rates and when they threatened to lodge complaints, got the local sheriff to terrorize them with physical violence.

No Wage Inspectors

More than 20,000 complaints are in WHA files. With an inspection staff of 109 men—approximately two to a state—it has been possible to investigate less than 15 per cent of law violation charges.

And of these cases, the Wage-Hour Administration's undermanned and overworked legal staff has been able to bring only 17 offenders into court.

Under its new appropriation, effective July 1, the WHA will be able to add another 100 inspectors. But this will be offset by the fact that in October enforcement operations will be doubled when a new batch of minimum wage regulations becomes effective.

WHA heads informed the President that a minimum of $11,000,000 a year is needed to administer the law. The Budget Bureau last winter fixed the agency's appropriation at $3,350,000, but the House, led by certain Democrats from the deep South, cut this to $3,200,000. The Senate restored the axed $150,000, but in the secrecy of a conference committee, the Gene Cox coherts wiped the sum out again.

WHA has asked the President to recommend an emergency grant of $4,000,000. Whether the money will be forthcoming will be another story. If it isn't, Cox and his block won't have to gut the law. It will be a relatively unimportant item on the statute books.

Note—Strangest aspect of the Wage-Hour situation is the failure of New England congressmen to go to bat for adequate enforcement funds. With their section losing industries to the South, Senators Lodge, Walsh et al have done almost nothing about it.

Jerry Voorhis

Only a few of his friends know it, but one of the most militant liberals in Congress also is one of the richest Congressmen.

He is Representative Jerry Voorhis, slender, shaggy-haired, sad-eyed, carelessly attired, who looks the passionately earnest crusoder that he is. Yet the young Californian is a millionaire many times over.

His humanitarian use of his wealth is as little known as his possession of it.

Voorhis and his father, Charles V. Voorhis, a banker who made a big fortune in oil and autos, have spent millions to educate underprivileged children. The monument to their philanthropy is the Voorhis School for Boys at San Dimas, California.

Presented to the State last year and now operated as a vocational branch of the University of California, the school was built by the Voorhis family in 1927 at a cost of millions of dollars. It has become to the West Coast what Father Flanagan's famous Nebraska institution is to the Mid-West. In addition to the construction cost, the Voorhis family spent over two million for maintenance in the eleven years they operated the school. During this time more than 600 orphans and sons of destitute parents were given free care and vocational training.

Poor Little Rich Boy

Voorhis himself went to a swank eastern school, Hotchkiss, later to Yale. But when his father offered to set him up in business with a fortune at his disposal, Jerry rebelled and started out to study the seamy side of life. First he worked with the YMCA in Germany during the inflation years of 1934-24 when it took several million marks to buy a cup of coffee. Later he worked in an automobile assembly plant in Charlotte, N. C.

Then he began his work teaching underphivileged boys, first at the Allendale Farm School in Illinois, later at a home for boys in Laramie, Wyoming, finally founding his own school in Southern California where he was headmaster until elected to Congress.

"You can reason with boys," says Congressman Voorhis gravely. "I wonder why that faculty seems to be lacking in so many adults."

GHOST DETOUR

BY OREN ARNOLD

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday: Dick agrees to help Roselee and Christine start their ghost detour venture. Meanwhile, he fills the mysterious money sack with paper, prepares to hide the real $12,000 elsewhere. The girls are already swamped with adventure!

CHAPTER IV

BEFORE 8 o'clock next morning Roselee and Christine were back at their ghost town twisting up the rough main street in Roselee's coupe. The sun had already dispelled any ghosts that had lurked in evening shadows, but the picturesque quality of the place impressed both girls now.

"It's darling!" Christine exclaimed, staring again at the ramshackle buildings.

"We're going to have ourselves a time!" Roselee predicted.

To their surprise they found not only Dick Bancroft, but Franklin Larraway as well. Franklin had first surprised his buddy by arriving the previous midnight, hours ahead of schedule.

"I almost shot him for a ghost or a robber," Dick grinned, after introductions. "He came rattling in, calling me names. But he's sold on the ghost detour idea. I'd of broken his long neck if he hadn't been, see?"

"Do you break many necks, Mr. Bancroft?" Christine inquired, loftily.

"Stop quarreling," Roselee ordered. "I—I own this place. I am also your boss. Get to work. All of you. Us, I mean. Now listen—"

She had many plans. She and Christine had talked until a late hour themselves. This was already July, and the highway two miles away was zooming with passengers, people with money in their pockets and adventure in their hearts, people who would gladly pay a dollar each to inspect a genuine ghost town.

Roselee talked a lot, and it swelled to a discussion. Everybody had ideas. Franklin caught the contagion of interest in the project. He had worked on the school papers and edited the yearbook, he knew a lot about promotion and advertising. "Okay then, Mr. Larraway, you and Christine take over the job of contacting the travel agencies and making a deal with them."

"And I know how to wangle some help from the highway maintenance crew. I can get the old dirt road from the highway cleared of shrubs and joshua growth and opened up for cars again," said Dick.

"That's ducky, and I have hired Mrs. Hogan to come and cook for us and maybe cook for any guests who want meals in the Ace High Hotel," Roselee put in. "Who is Mrs. Hogan? She's a middle-aged widow who has been a prospector in the hills, and who has often worked for dad. She'll be here today."

"I think we ought to have some prospectors and Indians and cowboys around for atmosphere," Christine added, "so I'll see to it, and I'll handle the bookkeeping and the records and do anything else you say."

THE powwow was extremely serious—nobody on earth can be more serious, when the mood strikes them, than ordinarily gay and ebullient college youths. And these four were still collegians at heart. They hadn't been out of school a month.

"You are not too disappointed, Mr. Larraway?" Roselee inquired, after the conference had ended. "At our breaking up your summer plans, I mean?"

"I am delighted! I had no definite plans."

"Do you want any—references? Or anything? I—I never had anybody working for me before!"

"There'll be labor trouble," Franklin predicted, gravely. "I am thinking of going on strike unless I get Saturday night off. I wish to take another of your employes to a dance."

"Who? What dance?"

"Miss Palmer, here. Surely there's a dance somewhere?"

"There's not any 'where' around here! This is isolated. It's a short run of 94 miles to Boulder Dam, if that helps!"

"Besides that, you haven't asked me!" Christine snapped, pretending anger. "We haven't even met socially!"

Franklin sighed heavily, still acting. "Ah me, I might have known it. Nothing is perfect any more, however sweet the promise. I briefly foresaw an idyllic summer, with adventure, money, romance, love—all the things of abundant living served to me in reckless abundance. But now—alas!"

"Alas, my foot!" Roselee grimaced at him, breaking his play-acting spell. "I'll fire you at once if you don't get to work. I intend to be hard-boiled."

They all had to laugh at her then. If anybody in christendom looked the opposite of hardness and meanness, it was dainty little Roselee Dale. She came almost to Franklin's shoulder. She looked slightly plumpish, as if she might be Dick's baby sister. She had a dimple that was as elusive as light, flashing beautifully when you least expected, gone when you didn't want it to be.

"Correct," Franklin turned serious now. "What's first?"

"The money," said Dick.

"Oh. That's right. I had become so interested in making money out of Goldcrest that I forgot we already had $12,000!" Roselee looked alarmed, without immediate cause. "Shouldn't we take it in to the sheriff, Dick?"

SHE never realized that she turned automatically to him for advice in that significant moment. It was a precedent that she was to follow more and more.

"Glor-ree, no! The sheriff's a half day's run from here. Besides, what's he got that I haven't got? My weight fluctuates, madam, between 200 and 201 pounds. I'd like a chance of capturing a robber, if robber it is."

"Suppose it isn't a robber?" Christine said. "Suppose it's—it's—"

"Well, there you are," said Franklin Larraway. "We don't know whose money it is. Dick's right. A sheriff might just ball up the works. So let's figure out something to trap the man or men who put the money there. Meantime, of course, the money should be hidden."

"We agreed to bury it," Roselee exclaimed. "Let's go do it now!"

"In the old mine shaft," Dick suggested.

They made an expedition of it, all four walking a hundred yards down into the sloping gullet of the long abandoned Goldcrest mine, guided by Dick's pocket flashlight. The place was earthy of smell, eerie to see, almost frightening. "Nothing more dangerous down here than maybe a scorpion or two," Dick declared, confidently. "I've already explored it."

They found a spot behind an old 8x8 inch post that supported some of the loose rock on the mine shaft ceiling and wall. The shaft was about eight feet high, and perhaps six wide, a mere hallway of intense darkness leading into the mountain. Dick's flashlight was as impotent as it had been at the bank vault the night before.

Dick had a rusted miner's pick they had found outside, a thing with a weak and broken handle, but conceivably of some value still. He gave the flashlight to Franklin, raised his stubby-handled pick to start digging a hole.

Crack!

In the poor light Dick misjudged the ceiling height. His pick scraped a rock, was deflected so that it hit the supporting post of wood.

Instantly there was a crash and a deafening roar.

"Look out!" Dick yelled.

He jumped back, striking Franklin as he did so. The flashlight fell from Franklin's hands, and the roaring ended in a high-pitched feminine scream.

Kansas City Girl Campers At Montserrat Recreational Area

Groups of Kansas City girls were sent this summer to the Rrancho Redbird camp at Montserrat recreational area by the Kansas City Association of Neighborhood Houses, so that the girls might have a taste of "real" outdoor life. Pictured in the upper left are four 14 and 15-year-old campers just returning from a swim in the modern and expensive swimming pool. To the right Harold Mohler, of Leeton, water front director, gives some advice to several of the younger misses who were objecting to leaving their splashing at the end of their swim period, even though it was supper time. Lower left is the main lodge and dining hall at camp Rancho.

City Girls Taste Country Life At Montserrat Camp

By Mary Ritchie

Through the paternal provisions of the government nearly 300 Kansas City girls, whose outdoor life is regularly limited to city playgrounds and parks, have enjoyed open air vacations this summer at Rancho Redbird, camp site No. 1 in the Montserrat recreation demonstration area, a federal project, located six miles south of Knob Noster.

The camp was leased this summer, for the third year, by the Kansas City Association of Neighborhood Houses as a girl's camp.

Their camping season was concluded this week.

Entering the $100,000 camp, after driving over new, rambling scenic roads, one views clusters of grey cabins nestled in the woodlands.

Modern Swimming Pool

Late in the afternoon, after the rest period for the girls, the visitor could hear shouts emanating from the modern, stone-walled swimming pool, or could see girls, from the ages of 10 to 19, practising dance steps in front of one of the buildings, or indulging in other of the numerous camp activities.

Swimming, under competent direction, was emphasized this summer by the camp leaders. The pool has its own engine plant for purification and for the daily changing of the water, and provides as fine and sanitary swimming facilities as could be found at an exclusive private camp.

Rancho Redbird is planned on a unit system. There are four units of seven cabins each, with one cabin housing the counselors of each unit. Each unit has its own recreation lodge, a large frame structure with a stone fireplace in the main room and an outdoor one inside a semi-circular stone enclosure built into the hills.

Dense Timber Stands

Architecturally all the buildings utilize the natural landscaping offered by the rolling country, dense in many parts with timber.

Each of the cabins in the units accomodates four girls, each having a single cot, and Mrs. J. V. C. Gregory of Tulsa, Okla., head counselor of the camp, said last week, that the privilege of having a "bed of her own" was an outstanding feature to many of the girls. The girls, sent from the nine settlement houses in the association, come principally from homes where conditions are crowded, and the space for freedom coupled with constructive recreational direction, offered during 12-day camping periods, gave a new turn to life for the girls.

In addition to the head counselor there were 20 other counselors, in charge of different phases of the campign program. All the counselors are either college graduates, or upperclassmen in colleges and universities.

List Of Activities

The activities included exploring the recreational area, which has a total of 3550 acres, modeling in native clay, other handicrafts, publishing a camp paper, dramatics, and music, as well as the most popular event-swimming.

Meals for the entire camp group were served at the main lodge, which has space for 123 diners, and were prepared by trained cooks. The kitchen has the most efficient equipment obtainable, while the dining hall itself, although simply arranged, has something of a "boarding school" atmosphere.

Water throughout the camp is piped from a 900-foot well that has a tank with a 10,000 gallon capacity.

Cleanliness and health were obviously stressed. The cabins and the recreation lodges, under the management of the leaders for the K. C. leasees, were kept neat and spotless.

A registered nurse was on duty all the time. Before leaving for the camp the girls were required to have a complete physical examination which was repeated upon their arrival at the site, again after the first six days, and finally just before leaving.

The Montserrat Recreational area is one of 24 in the United States, with a second in Missouri, the Cuivre River project, located near Troy in the eastern part of the state.

For City Children

The camps in these areas have been built ostensibly for the purpose of giving under-privileged city children a vacation in the country. However, Camp No. 2 in the Montserrat area, Camp Swanee, is used by the Camp Fire Girls. Other groups, making proper application, may obtain leases for camping periods in the area. Next month the 4-H clubs will be the lodgers at the camp Rancho.

Tuesday was the last day for the young charges under the auspices of the Kansas City Association of Neighborhood Houses. The 96 girls who were enrolled for the final 12-day period were from the Jewish Educational Institute, Institutional church and Italian Institute. The earlier groups were from the West Side Community Center, Gudalupe Center, Mattie Rhodes Neighborhood Center, Swope Settlement, Minute Circle Friendly House and Whatsover Community House.

Opening Ceremonies

Pledges of allegiance to the flag and the matinal flag raising opened the day for the girls, of varied nationalities.

Campfire services in a beautiful ravine, reached by a picturesque camp trail through woods and meadows, was the memorable closing event of each day. Walking in complete silence, and with a reverence matched only by the Sunday inspirational services, the entire camp personnel marched two by two to the fairyland spot, enhanced in beauty at twilight.

There they sat on halved logs arranged in a circle that resembled a Greek amphitheater in design and participated in or watched the campfire program that brought to an end a day near perfect.

Girls Not Destitute

The girls sent out by the city association were considered as under-privileged, but statedly were not destitute. A fee of $2 was charged for each camper, paid either by her family, or by interested persons. Most of the girls had a little spending money. A major part of the money for the lease is appropriated to the settlement groups through funds obtained in the charity drives, the remainder supplemented by their own resources.

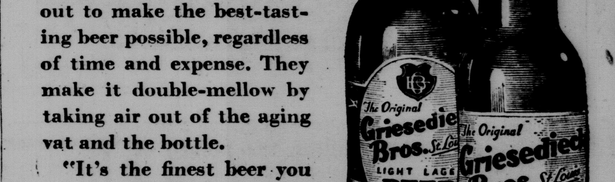

Certainly the youthful girl campers were having the time of their lives, just as hundreds of girls of more affluent classes who spend their summers at private camps.

But one couldn't help but wonder about the real little city waifs—those who have not been reached by the government or established municipal agencies—what of them? It seems that they, too, should benefit from the summer sun.

Slight Gain To Wheat Market

CHICAGO, July 21.—(AP)—Wheat prices closed with small net gains today but corn slumped about a cent to new six year lows.

The recovery movement in wheat, which was in evidence in other leading world markets, reflected to some extent purchasing of commercial and speculative interests attracted by the low prices established yesterday. Strength in securities also was a factor but most attention in the wheat trade was centered on the government export subsidy program. Federal officials denied rumors this would be discoutinued and indicated sales might be on a larger scale soon. The government was reported offering wheat to exporters on a flat price indicating a substantial subsidy.

Wheat closed ⅛ to ⅜ cent higher than yesterday, July 64c to 64⅛c, September 64⅝c to 64¾c; corn ¼ to ⅞ cent down, July 39⅛c to 39c; Septembr- 40⅜c to 40¼c; oats ⅛ to 1 cent lower.

Recovery By Leading Stocks

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP)—With both foreign and domestic news exhibiting a more hopeful tone marketwise, leading stocks today pounded out recoveries of 1 to more than 3 points.

The list jogged along at comfortably higher levels until around midday. Then, following advices from Berlin that officialdom decried war talk and indicated a peaceful settlement of the Danzig question was expected, a burst of buying hit the ticker tape with such force the recording machinery fell behind floor dealings for a while. Steels, motors, rails, aircrafts and specialties were in the lead. There was an assortment of new year's highs.

The pace soon slowed, but prices held around the best until the final hour when light profit taking shaded quotations in many cases.

Despite frequent quiet intervals, transfers for the five hours approximated 1,300,000 shares.

Brightening the picture, brokers suggested, were rumors England and Germany might get together to iron out their difficulties. In addition exceptionally favorable second quarter earnings reports from pivotal corporations continued to bolster speculative and investment thinking.

Friction Over Oil And Coal Is Arousing Fear

Part Of Japanese Fleet Moves To Northern Waters

TOKYO, July 21—(AP)—A naval ministry source disclosed today that a section of the Japanese fleet was assembling in northern waters as a result of a Soviet Russian threat to confiscate Japanese oil and coal properties.

The size of the naval force, its base, and destination were not stated. The naval source declared, however that "our ships and men are ready."

Asked if Japan were likely to take armed action to prevent confiscation, he replied: "in my opinion that is possible. The situation is extremely grave."

(On Monday Soviet Russia announced rejection of a Japanese demand in 'ultimatum form' regarding the rights of Japanese oil and coal concessionaries in Sakhalin Island, which is half Russian and half Japanese. It is off the Siberian coast.)

The government awaited word as to whether Soviet authorities had carried out a threat to confiscate the property at a midnight Thursday deadline. No report had been received thus far either from Sakhalin or from Moscow.

At Moscow, Shigmore Togo, Japanese ambassador, was engaged in negotiations with S. A. Lozovsky, vice president of foreign affairs, in a last minute effort to avert a clash.

Vice Admiral Masazo Sakonji, president of the North Sakhalin Oil company, said "Japan will never surrender her concessions."

"If necessary," he added, "we will occupy the island."

Official circles expressed a fear of the repetition of the Nikolaevsk massacre of 1920, when some 600 Japanese were slain.

The present dispute arises from a Soviet court decision levying two fines amounting to 700,000 yen ($190,000) on Janpanese companes. The Japanese appealed, charging that Soviet claims were groundless.

Then a Thursday, midnight, zero hour was set for payment of the fine, with confiscation as an alternative.

Sakonji said the fine was "patiently illegal."

"Obviously," he stated, "the Soviets never expected it would be paid, thus permitting them to threaten confiscation. It is part of a large-scale program to force Japan to relinquish the concessions. This will never do.

"The oil concessions are particularly valuable, owing to the importance of natiqnal defense."

Sakonji charged Soviet obstructionist tactics had reduced the annual oil yield from 150,000 barrels to less than 40,000.

He said the Soviets had reduced the quota of food supplies, machinery and replacements to one-third the normal amount, with workmen facing starvation "before the end of the summer."

The vice-admiral also charged many arrests without reason had been made by Soviet authorities, in one of which a Japanese prisoner was kept standing continuously for 11 days until "finally his legs developed a kind of dropsical condition and burst."

Japan acquired rights to operate coal mines and oil fields along a 100-mile strip of the Sakhalin eastern coast as a result of the tragedy at Nikolaevsk, which is on the Siberian mainland, across the Tatar strait from Sakhalin. (Japanese had occupied all of the island in 1920 but withdrew from the northern half on receipt of the concessions.)

A convention signed at Peiping on January 20, 1925, guaranteed Japanese rights in the island.

Friction over the concessions has continued for a long period.

Plant Life On Mars Indicated

BLOEMFONTEIN, Union of South Africa, July 21—(AP)—The First successful color pictures of Mars, taken with special equipment by Earl C. Slipher, American astronomer, indicate that plant life exists on the planet.

Slipher, brother of Dr. Vest Melvin Slipher, director of the Lowell observatory at Flagstaff, riz., is here studying the planet which next Thursday will be the closest to the earth it has been in 15 years—36,000,000 miles away.

The scientist's photographs, taken Wednesday night, diclosed that a huge dark spot or great eye of Mars seems to have assumed a shape not observed for 50 years if ever before.

Slipher suggested the change was caused by fresh vegetation over an area roughly the size of the United States. The "great eye" is near Mars' southern ice cap which is breaking up now with are arrival of Martian spring.

The planet as a whole is pale now but seasonal changes have been noted the past few nights. Vapor and haze usually attendant with the melting of Mars' southern snows is absent this season.

Slipher brought a special chlorophyll detector to be used shortly in determining the density of Mars' vegetation.

Sedalia Legionnaires Attended Barbecue

Robert Q. Henderson, Peter T. O'Brien, Arthur Brill and E. E. Hammond motored to Cole county Thursday night to attend the barbecue given by the Roscoe Enloe Post of the American Legion, at Sunnyside Club, on the Maries river, about fourteen miles east of Jefferson City. There were four hundred Legionnairies from several Missouri cities in attendance.

Barbecued turkey and lamb were the main dishes on the menu.

Evidence On Bridges Piles Up

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21—(AP)—Transcribed testimony about Harry Bridges' asserted connections with the communist party was piling up into fat volumes today, as the deportation hearing of the Australian-born labor leader drew toward close of its second week.

Yesterday, William Henry Howard, 49, Portland, Ore., ex-marine fireman, testified he didn't like the way Bridges tried "to grab control" over every maritime union on the coast. Thomas Shoemaker chief of government counsel, asked how Bridges did this.

"He worked it by his stooges," Howard said.

Asked what he meant by that, the witness said, "communist party stooges." Later he declared, "when a maritime man says 'the party' he means the communist party."

Howard's waterfront jargon sometimes puzzled the hearing-room, sometimes won chuckles. He waved a big hand with a tatooed American eagle on it as he talked.

He told of a meeting he had with Bridges in San Pedro, following the 1936 maritime federation convention there, when he quoted the Australian as saying.

"Well, maybe I am a commie (communist) and if I am, maybe I'd be damned proud of it."

Howard said he quit the maritime federation because he didn't like the way it was run.

Joseph William Marcus, former waiter in a San Francisco restaurant related that upstairs rooms of the establishment were used as a communist headquarters in 1934.

"Between 12 and 2 a. m. There were a lot of men coming up and down the back stairs," he testified "they looked really like stevedores. I wouldn't want to meet one of them on a dark night."

Marcus said Bridges came to the restaurant's cocktail lounge and bar frequently. Shoemaker asked whether Bridges ever attended any of the upstairs meetings, and Marcus replied, "I never seen him."

Convict Under Parole Slain

PHILADELPHIA, July 21—(AP)—In Philadelphia's third gangland slaying in less than two months, Frank Piccole, 54-year-old recently paroled convict, was shot today as he sat in a meat truck waiting for a traffic light to change.

A blast from an automatic pump gun cut him down before he was aware of two men who pulled alongside in a black automobile. One poked the gun in Piccole's face and fired. Then the car sped on.

Piccole once before was the target of gangland bullets—before he was sentenced to eastern penitentiary nine years ago on a second-degree murder conviction. He was released June 14.

That shooting in which two men pumped bullets from a speeding automobile was said by police to have resulted from a war between narcotic peddlers. Piccole once was sentenced to ten years for selling illegal narcotics.

Today's burst of gunfire followed less than a month the killing of "Willie" Lanzetti, known to police as an underworld character. His bullet-punctured body was found July 1, sewn in a burlap sack and tossed behind a wall.

Another underworld figure, Danny Day, was killed May 29 as he sped down a street in a flashy roadster with a blonde woman companion. The too, was cut down by a blast fired from a car which pulled along side.

After Ripper Of Picture Off Wall

KANSAS CITY, July 21—(AP)—Jackson county has two court houses, one picture of Gov. Lloyd Crow Stark and a mystery.

Because most country officers were elected with the backing of the T. J. Pendergast machine, Governor Stark's picture did not fit into the general decoration scheme either at the elaborate sub-county building at Kansas City or at the more modest courthouse in the legal county seat—Independence.

John P. Sherrod, named recorder of deeds by the governor, was an exception. He hung Stark's portrait in his office.

Someone ripped it from the wall, shattered the glass, cut the likeness slightly.

"We're working on the case and I hope to be able to run it down," said Fred Canfil, director of county buildings. "I'm going to be plenty tough on the fellow who did that job when I catch him.

It's such a mean little thing,"

'Lone Wolf Spy Hunt' at Uptown Today And Saturday

The "Lone Wolf," suave, light-fingered international thief, returns to thrilling life in "The Lone Wolf Spy Hunt," with Warren William superb in the title role. Ida Lupino is co-featured in the romantic interest. The film is blessed with comedy and romance, taking away some of the stark realism of most spy stories. In order to recover some stolen plans, the disappearance for which he has been blamed, the Lone Wolf must become enmeshed in one event after another. His past makes things difficult, but the Lone Wolf is a man not easily turned aside from his purpose. Others in the cast are Ralph Morgan, Rita Hayworth and little Virginia Weidler as the Lone Wolf's daughter. Second feature on the program is "Texas Stampede" with Charles Starrett and the melodious Sons of the Pioneers.

To Take More Than Crisis For Congress Call

desk in the study of his home here.

No Immediate Issue

He was told that senate isolationists were predicting he would carry the neutrality issue to the country on a prospective trip to the west coast.

Mr. Roosevelt wanted to know what neutrality issue existed. A reporter remarked that the arms embargo was the issue and the president then asked whether it was not closed till next January by action of the senate.

There is and can be no immediate issue before the country, he amplified, because certain groups in the senate precluded any action until January.

He said it should be made perfectly clear, of course, that those groups had accepted the responsibility for withholding action on neutrality.

About all we can do between now and January is pray there won't be another crisis and pray awfully hard, Mr. Roosevelt declared.

Since senators who attended the Tuesday night conference talked about it somewhat freely, the president was asked whether he cared to say anything from his angle.

Denial of Clashes

He denied there were any clashes at the meeting, which was attended by both Democratic and Republican leaders of the senate. Reports of clashes, he said, were made entirely out of whole cloth. There was only one disagreement between any of the individuals present, he said. Senator Borah (R-Idaho), he went on, did intimate rather clearly and definitely that his private information from Europe was better than that received by the United States government.

After Secretary Hull had taken Borah up on that point, Mr. Roosevelt said, the senator finally asserted he had not meant to enter his information was better. The whole affair, the president said, was couched in very parliamentary language.

Asked whether Vice-president Garner had "stepped into the situation," the president said he had not. He said Garner had not made a statement, attributed to him by some of those at the conference, to the effect that: "we might as well be candid, captain. You haven't got the votes."

As for the information from abroad which brought the disagreement between Hull and Borah, the chief executive said that from every capital in Europe, without exception was evidence of preparations for an eventuality that was believed to be fairly close.

He said it should be emphasized, however, that there were no allegations of probabilities of trouble abroad, only statements of possibilities.

With reference to his trip to the coast, the president said plans might be changed, that he might spend time along the Atlantnc coast and tgo to San Francisco later to visit the Golden Gate exposition.

He did not indicate whether he was contemplating any cruises on the Atlantic seaboard, however. The president had expected to leave for the coast soon after congress adjourned, see the exposition and then go up the "inside passage" to Juneau, Alaska. But he said it appeared congress might be on the job until August 5 and he had been advised that he might arrive in the west too late for the trip to Alaska because the fog got bad in the passage.

Press For Embargo

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Well-informed senators said today President Roosevelt has indicated to legislative leaders that he is not interested in obtaining action at this session on a bill to curb exports of war supplies to Japan.

This information, they said, was conveyed to the group which convinced the President and Secretary Hull Tuesday night that it would be impossible to force immediate senate consideration of neutrality legislation.

Despite these reports, Chairman Pittman (D-Nev) said he would ask the foreign relations committee to consider his Japanese embargo resolution as soon as the state department rules whether it could involve a violation of the 1911 treaty of commerce and navigation with Japan.

The Pittman resolution was said to have been brought up incidentally at the White House neutrality conference. One conferee said the President dismissed the subject with the off-hand observation that he did not think it was necessary for congress to go into that question at this session.

Not Enter Controversy

WASHINGTON, July 21.—(AP)—Senator Borah (R-Idaho) suggested today that the customary injunction against discussion of what goes on at White House conferences should be lifted so that "both sides" could tell what happened in them.

The senator made the suggestion after President Roosevelt told his press conference at Hyde Park, N. Y., today that there had been only one controversy at Tuesday night's bi-partisan conference on neutrality at the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt said Borah intimated then rather clearly and definitely that his private information from Europe was better than that received by the United States government.

Declining to comment on this, Borah said:

"I don't propose to enter into any controversy with the President if it can be avoided, but I do think that the bans on White House conferences ought to be lifted when the conference adjourns, so that more than one side can do the talking."

The Idahoan, ranking Republican on the senate foreign relations committee, was represented by some of those who attended the meeting as having engaged in a rather heated exchange with the President. This was said to have been over Mr. Roosevelt's declaration that responsibility for failure to act on neutrality legislation in this session be placed on the senate and that the country he informed that the responsibility rested there.

Borah declined to comment on Mr. Roosevelt's contention that failure to settle the neutrality question would hurt business but Senator Johnson (R-Calif), another opponent of the administration's program, declared:

"That's poppycock."

New Invitation For Return To Appeasement

could be discussed," he said. "Indeed Colonel Beck (Polish foreign minister) has himself said in his speech of May 5 that if the government of the reich is guided by two conditions, namely, peaceful intentions and peaceful methods of procedure, all conversations are possible."

Whitehall is now asking whether today's Berlin statement was Hitler's method of trying to create the "clearer atmosphere." But officials pointed out that Chamberlain specifically mentioned "possible improvements" of the Danzig situation and the view here is that incorporatoin of the free city into Germany hardly is susceptible to that interpretation.

While the Berlin statement was making headlines in London afternoon newspapers, the government repeated a declaration that it had nothing to do with the Commander Stephen King-Hall newsletter that was printed here for distribution in Germany.

Germans had charged that Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax was supporting the newsletter. (King-Hall, a retired naval officer, has sent appeals to "dear German readers" denouncing Hitler's foreign policy and predicting German defeat in case of war.)

Foreign Undersecretary Richard Austen Butler told the house of commons:

"I take this opportunity of repeating the categorical denial given in the German broadcast of the British Broadcasting Corporation of July 14 that his majesty's government is in any way connected with or responsible for these letters."

Dispatches from Rome, meanwhile, said Italians concurred wholeheartedly in the German view that the return of Danzig to Germany could be accomplished without war.

Fascists have been advising Poland for some time to avoid trouble by letting Germany have Danzig.

Assurances Given

An Italian conviction that Germany would refrain from a settlement by force was reported when the German-Italian military alliance was signed in May.

Hitler then was reported to have given Mussolini assurances along this line.

Fascists cited Mussolini's decision to break up big landed estates in Sicily and settle them with small farmers over a ten-year period, announced yesterday, as a further indication that Italy wished to avoid war.

Virginio Gayda, authoritative writer, declared in Il Giornale D' Italia:

"Once more by its obvious measures for peaceful work Italy makes known that it is not thinking of any initiative subversive to European peace."

Gayda said Italy, however, maintains her own claims on France in Tunisia, Jibuti and Suez canal just as Germany insists on having Danzig.

In Paris, officials said they were inclined to regard the Berlin development as a "possible change" in the Danzig situation but withheld further comment until the French ambassador in Germany coudl report.

In the London talk of overtures toward European "peace" discussions there were reports current in some foreign diplomatic circles that Britain might favor some "new and sensational attempt to come to a settlement with Germany."

Look For Solution

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN, July 21.—(AP)—A German government spokesman in one of the most unequivocal recent utterances on Danzig said today Germany optimistically expect a solution of the problem favorable to the Reich but rejects the idea of force to regain the free city.

"Aur fuehrer is 100 per cent for peace," he said. "Now as before we expect an uncompromising solution of the Danzig situation along peaceful lines.

"Germany has not the least desire for a conflict of arms to bring about the uncompromising solution which we confidently expect. We reject 100 per cent such a warlike solution and would regret extremely if that were the only way."

Saying that Adolf Hitler clung to the definition of the Nazi party convention at Nuernberg September 2-11 as "the party day of peace," the spokesman added:

"If he did not mean it don't you suppose we would have started to prepare the public by a press and propaganda campaign for another eventuality?"

The statement was made at a time when Poland and Danzig are seeking to fix responsibility for a border incident in which a Polish soldier was killed yesterday by a Danzig Nazi official.

(Poles accused the Danziger of shooting across the frontier without warning but the official Danzig explanation was that he fired in self defense.)

The Danish-Polish border slaying seemed to cause little commotion in official German quarters and belief was voiced that the incident would be closed quickly.

Bill Passed On Politics Ban In Relief Work

to participate in national political conventions or other political activity.

Keeps Politicians Out

The section declares that, with the exception of the President a few other officials, persons in the executive branch of the government must not use their official authority to influence an election and must not take part in "political management or political campaigns."

The standing vote of 187 to 103 went a long way to restoring the Hatch bill to the form in which it passed the Senate weeks ago. Subsequent to Senate passage, President Roosevelt and other administration men criticized it as badly drawn and the House judiciary committee altered it in such a way that its sponsors raised the cry that it had been "emasculated."

A number of administration legislators fought doggedly tonight for the House committee's version. They insisted that the Senate bill was so loose and so broad that it would prevent members of congress, for example, from running for reelection.

To meet the latter objection, Rep. Dempsey wrote into his section approved tonight a clause specifically exempting members of congress from the bill's provisions.

Silly Amendments

Nettled by the Republican solidatory on the measure, two Democrats offered facetious amendments which rolled up a surprising vote.

Representative Duncan (D.-Mo.) first proposed to prohibit a candidate for congress making an "audible public speech" or spending any money for buttons, circulars, and placards. He was defeated, 72 to 188.

Then, Representative Sacks (D-Pa.) proposed to make it unlawful for a political party to make public a platform "which promises the voters anything." He, too, was defeated, on a standing vote of 28 to 141.

Earlier, at the urging of Rep. Mott (R.-Ore.), the House voted to delete from the bill, as presented by the judiciary committee, a section saying that administrative employes of the government have the right to "participate in the activities of a political party."

Provisions of Bill

WASHINGTON, July 21—(AP)—The Hatch bill to curb "pernicious political activity," as passed by the house, would prohibit:

1. Participation of federal office-holders in national political activity or management. The president, vice-president members of congress and certain other policy-making officials are exempted.
2. Intimidation or coercion with intent to interfere in ntional elections.
3. Use of the authority of federal administrative officers to interfere with or affect presidential or congressional nominations or elections.
4. Promises of employment or payment in exchange for a vote.
5. Solicitation or receipt for political purposes of funds from a person paid with relief money.
6. Furnishing for political purposes lists of persons receiving money from the government.

The provisions are basically the same as in the senate which must agree to the house measure before it goes to President Roosevelt.

Fines of $1,000 and imprisonment for one year could be imposed for violations of the relief section and the prohibition against coercion and intimidation. An administrative officer found guilty of a violation could be removed from office.

Rep. Martin (R-Mass), the minority leader, said the house action would "provide a clean election in 1940." Rep. Dempsey said it would "clean up the pernicious political activities that have aroused the people so much" in recent months.

But Rep. Parsons (D-Ill), a leader of the opponents, declared that the hands of many office-holders—both Democratic and Republican—would be tied in the 1940 campaigns.

"This administration under Mr. Roosevelt has been the most non-partisan since Andrew Jackson," he said. "The President has appointed to office members of all parties. The bill will tie their hands and interfere with the rights of free speech.

"We will now have the Republicans stooping to their old tricks of getting contributions from large corporations. The Democrats will be handicapped because of lack of funds from the small contributors where they have always received the larger part of their funds.

"The Democrats who joined in the passage of this bill did it largely as a slap at President Roosevelt."

Foe Of Wagner Act Considered

and to check on the general effects of the law on employer-employe relations.

The committee also will have the right to suggest amendments to the Wagner Act and recommend changes in the personnel of the labor board.

Debate on Board Field

House debate on the resolution covered the broad field of labor legislation and the operation of the Wagner Act specifically.

The tall, spare Smith, former Virginia circuit court judge, told the house "something is wrong that needs looking into."

"I have a definite feeling that good work can be done for labor, industry and the government if the matter is looked into calmly by the men of this house," he said. "We may be able to bring back some suggestion to cure the evils, whatever they are, and there must be some."

Chairman Norton (D-NJ) of the labor committee denounced the proposal as one to "usurp" the powers of her committee. Smith, she shouted, "is the last man in the world to pass upon labor legislation."

"I voted against the national labor relations act when it first came before congress, because it was palpably unconstitutional. But time has changed the supreme court and the supreme court has changed the constitution," Smith said.

Representative Ramspeck (D-Ga) assisted Mrs. Norton in her fight. He said that while he had not always agreed with the labor board, an investigation by a special committee "would make worthless the work of the labor committee," which has been holding hearings for 10 weeks on Wagner Act amendments.

Representative Cox (D-Ga) declared, however, that "we'll be here until Gabriel blows his horn" if congress waited for the labor committee to suggest revision of the law.

There were other developments on the labor scene while the house was putting through the resolution.

Chairman Thomas (D-Utah) of the senate labor committee proposed that a single "umpire or czar" be empowered to settle the dispute between the CIO and the AFL. The referee, he said, might have powers akin to those of Will Hays in the motion picture industry.

The LaFollette civil liberties committee recommended to Thomas' committee enactment of a bill to out law spies and use of tear gas and munitions in labor disputes.

Cooler Breezes Head This Way

ST. LOUIS, July 21—(AP)—A decided change to cooler weather in the northern and central Rocky Mountain states is reflected in the weather forecast for Missouri today.

A drop in temperatures is predicted for northwest and west central portions of the state tonight, and in other sections of Missouri tomorrow.

Maximum temperatures yesterday ranged from 82 degrees at Arcadia to 96 at Warsaw. No rainfall was reported.

Subpoenas In Russell Case

CHICAGO, July 21— (AP) — Twelve subpoenas were issued today for persons who the federal government believes can help indict Jack C. Russell, Oklahoma convict, for kidnaping and killing William Scott Hamilton, a young salesman of Arkansas City, Kas., last week.

Federal removal proceedings were asked of government authorities in Oklahoma where Russell has been held since capture. Meanwhile, Martin Ward, assistant United States district attorney of Chicago issued the 12 summonses for appearance before a federal grand jury beginning Tuesday.

The witness, whose names were withheld, were believed to have first hand information of the movements of Russell since his flight from the Oklahoma state penitentiary at McAlester until his capture at Ozark, Ark.

Arabs Bear Gifts

JERUSALEM, July 21.—(AP)—Arabs bearing gifts of rice, flour and choice fowls took to the Moab Hills last night to beseech a rebel band of their own race to release a kidnaped preacher from Ohio.

The prisoner is 29-year-old Gerould R. Goldner and the Arab kidnapers want $5,000 to free him, according to Dr. Jacob Goldner, his father, who also was kidnaped but permitted to return to Jerusalem to arrange for ransom.

Pastor In Cleveland

Dr. Goldner, 67, is a Christian church pastor in Cleveland; his son is pastor of the Christian church at Mogadore, O. The latter's wife and their 10-month-old son are in Cleveland.

United States consul George Wadsworth joined in the rescue but a preliminary search by British planes, police and military authorities was suspended while friendly Arabs made an effort to find the abductors.

The Arabs bearing gifts were residents of the area near the Dead Sea where the young minister and his father were seized. Influential Arabs in Jerusalem also were active and Greek monks of the Mar Saba convent, which the Goldners visited, started a separate search.

Dr. Goldner said he and his son left Jerusalem Tuesday and visited Mar Saba that night, rising early the next morning to return to Jerusalem.

Armed Arab Rebel

"After about 45 minutes of easy riding," he said, "we were accosted by an armed Arab rebel who forced us to wait until he was joined by three others.

"Soon we were surrounded by 11 Arabs who escorted us to their headquarters in an abandoned cave.

"There one rebel who spoke a little English informed me I would be able to return to Jerusalem but my son must remain until $5,000 was produced. I was escorted to the outskirts of Jerusalem by two rebels."

(Dr. Goldner telegraphed relatives in Cleveland that "Gerould is safe." The Goldners left the United States June 10 on an 11-weeks tour of the Holy Land.)

Shoe Leather Stocks Are Sold

ST. LOUIS, July 21—(AP)—A sale of shoe leather stocks of the bankrupt Hamilton-Brown Shoe company brought between $192,000 and $195,000.

Auctioneer Arthur Albert said the material, sold in 1140 lots yesterday to buyers from California, Texas, Massaschusetts and St. Louis factories, had a cost price of $273,000 and had been appraised at $300,000.

Meanwhile, trustees John W. Lake and James K. Vardaman, Jr., were allowed fees of $5,000 each in federal court for services in reorganization proceedings that preceded bankruptcy for the company.

Federal Judge George H. Moore took under advisement the petition of the law firm of Leahy, Walther, Hecker & Ely for a fee of $25,000 for services in reorganization. A Boston law firm's petition for $3,500 for representing creditors during reorganization also was taken under advisement.

Joseph H. Grand, attorney for a group of creditors, opposed the $25,000 fee, claiming the law firm could ask a fee only for services in connection with the reorganization which took the shoe concern out of court.

ST. LOUIS, July 21—(AP)—Two men forcing their way into the automobile of Vincent Hollenback, a building materials firm official, robbed him of $1,256 at 9:30 a. m., just after he left a bank at Grand boulevard and St. Louis avenue, with the money in small denominations to meet a payroll.

After releasing Hollenbeck, they abandoned his car half an hour later and escaped.

McCormack Is Quizzed By Jury

KANSAS CITY, July 21.—A. L. McCormack, St. Louis insurance man and key figure in the federal government's case against Boss Tom Pendergast and R. Emmet O'Malley, was questioned by Jackson county's grand jury today.

Pendergast and O'Malley, former state insurance superintendent, now are serving Leavenworth penitentiary sentences for income tax evasion.

Named by federal officials as the go-between in the payment of $62,500 to O'Malley and $315,000 to Pendergast for their approval of the 1936 Missouri insurance compromise, McCormack was summoned at the suggestion of a St. Louis grand jury which last week indicted O'Malley for bribery.

After indicting O'Malley on a charge of receiving a bribe in St. Louis, the St. Louis grand jurors wrote the Kansas City jurors suggesting they take action against Pendergast, deposed political boss, who, they said, was not under jurisdiction of St. Louis authorities.

Earlier this week the Jackson county jury had received income tax returns of O'Malley and Pendergast, both serving federal income tax evasion prison terms at Leavenworth.

Meanwhile, McCormack's resignation as president and a partner of the Charles L. Crane Agency Co., of St. Louis was announced by an officer of the firm. McCormack declined comment except to say he would remain with the firm as a salesman.

Overtures For Peace In Europe

LONDON, July 21—(AP)—Talk of overtures toward European 'peace' discussions spread today despite a lack of confirmation.

One report was that Britain's ambassador to Germany, Sir Nevile Henderson, might "very shortly" establish contact with Reichsfuehrer Hitler "to find out just what his terms are for world peace."

Some saw a possible connection between this and reports current in some foreign diplomatic circles here that Britain might favor some "new and sensational attempt to come to a settlement with Germany."

There was nothing concrete to support either rumor, yet evidence of a more favorable outlook persisted in spite of yesterday's Danzig incident in which a Polish border official was shot by a free city customs officer.

Optimism expressed by Prime Minister Chamberlain in a letter made public yesterday was furthered by the departure of United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy for a brief vacation at a villa near Cannes, on the French Riviera. Kennedy conferred at length with the prime minister yesterday.

The Chamberlain letter, urging support of a government parliamentary candidate, had said there were no international disputes which "could not be solved by peaceful means."

The Henderson-Hitler rumor was attributed to commons lobby talk by the Daily Mirror which also mentioned a report of "persistent" gossip in foreign circles here "that Hitler intends to make a peace gesture and that the German foreign office has given a hint to Sir Nevile Henderson to have anti-German propaganda damped down."

WASHINGTON, July 21.—(AP)—The senate approved and sent to the house today a "truth in fabrics" bill that would require labeling of most manufactured woolen products to show their contents.

The measure was passed after two days of debate. It drew major support from western senators in wool producing areas and opposition from senators representing New England textile centers.

For Financing Lending Under Present Powers

years with its present borrowing authority.

The former RFC chairman was said to have added, however, that some amendments to existing law would be necessary to carry out such features of the lending program as the leasing of equipment to railroads and the construction of toll roads.

Committeemen of both parties told reporters that Jones nevertheless had reiterated his previously expressed support of the lending program. They added, however, that he testified under questioning the RFC had unused borrowing authority totaling almost $1,400,000,000.

Senator McNary (R-Ore), the minority leader, told reporters the Republicans "believe federal agencies now in existence can take care of the items contained in the lending bill, and there is no need for further authorizations."

The Republican strategy called for a joint effort with anti-administration Democrats to impose restrictive amendments and then make a final stand against the bill itself.

Submits Revised Bill

Democratic leader Barkley, sponsor of the lending program in the senate, submitted a revised bill yesterday. Among other things, he eliminated the words "self-liquidating" from the title and called it instead a program of "recoverable assets."

The senate banking committee considered holding night sessions in an effort to bring the lending bill to the floor by Monday. Unless the bill is taken up in both chambers early next week, leaders said, it is improbable that congress can quit by July 29. The week-end of August 4-6 appeared more likely.

Beyond the lending program and pending amendments to the social security act, only legislative odds and ends remained. The social security changes, awaiting compromise action by a joint senate-house committee, may be finally approved in a few days.

The house last night passed the Hatch bill to curb political activity of federal employes and relief officials.

The house also voted for a far reaching investigation of the National Labor Relations Board by a five man committee.

The house called up today a transportation bill designed to provide uniform regulations for rail, motor and water carriers.

There was growing doubt whether congress would act at this session on a series of amendments to the wage-hour law.

Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer Andrews withdrew his support yesterday from a proposal to exempt "white collar" employes receiving a guaranteed monthly income of $200 or more. He previously had recommended the exemption but announced he was changing his view because it was opposed by organized labor.

Source Streams

"From the bountiful supply of spiritual power there comes streams which await our approach. Private prayer and public worship, Bible reading and quiet meditation, secret communion and public confession are channels filled with spiritual power for the benefit of weary travelers. Reading good literature, enjoying great music, appreciating choice art, and living in harmony with nature are worthy means of appropriating spiritual power. Fellowship with God and fellowship with men tap the resources of God and open the gates of eternal power. All of us need spiritual power to master the material and the temporal. The flood-streams pointed out by the Church of God can satisfy our spiritual thirst to the end that we may have spiritual power."

How Proceed when Experiencing Difficulties in Getting Along With Others?

Society is so complicated that it is absolutely necessary to live with others, often with those with whom it is difficult to get along. To be agreeable and live at peace with all men is our problem. The three questions having to do with conversation: "Is it kind? Is it true? Is it necessary?" furnishes a practical principle that will solve difficulties in personal relationships.

Instead of saying what we think, the better way is to exercise self-control, say nothing, until the whole situation can be well considered, and if it is necessary to speak, apply the test of the three questions. Remembering that to be kind does not only apply to words but to the spirit one possesses when speaking; it may take time to be certain of the truthfulness of a statement, and finally, it may be the part of wisdom to say nothing.

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

Asa: O Life of Trust. II Chronicles 14:2-12 for Sunday, July 23.

Asa, king of Judah, whose parents were of bad repute, lead the first religious revival of Judah after it was ruled by kings.

V. 2. "And Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord." He was sincere in his motives and diligent in all his endeavors to do the right thing always. When we see a good man we see the noblest thing God has ever made. Such a man has a future.

V. 3. "And he took away the altars of the strange gods, and the high places, and brake down the images, and cut down the groves." When true religion went out of the hearts of the people they seemed to have vainly tried to make up for this loss by multiplying pagan gods. Asa's father lead in this wayward way of living. When parents go wrong, the children have a rightful privilege of changing the inherited program.

V 4. "And commanded Judah to seek the Lord God of their fathers, and to do the law and the commandment." Asa removed the false that he might establish the true worship. Unless the better way of life is presented to those walking in evil ways, all denunciation of sin has no effect.

V. 6. "And he built fenced cities in Judah for this land had rest, and he had no war in those years, because the Lord had given him rest." Asa took advantage of the prevailing peace to build fortified cities. Not only must we see to it that we individually walk acceptably with God but we must carry our devotion to God to the smallest details of our lives and thus safeguard all of life.

V. 7. "Therefore he said unto Pulah, let us build these cities, and make about them walls, and towers and gates, and bars, while the land is yet before us; because we have sough tthe Lord our God, we have sought the Lord our God, given us rest on every side. So they built and prospered." Above the devices of men the will of God still reigns. In the end, he punishes evil in both men and nations and brings true prosperity to those who obey His commandments to do them.

V. 8. "And Asa had an army of men that bare targets and spears, out of Judah three hundred thousand; and out of Benjamin that bare shields and drew bows, two hundred and four-score thousand: all these were mighty men of valor." This was a program purely of self-defense. So long as a nation is surrounded by barbarism, paganism and nations with ideals that might makes right, it seems wise that strong physical means of protection are necessary.

V. 9. "And there came out against them Verah the Ethiopian with a host of a thousand, and three hundred chariots." Sure enough a mighty force was in evidence; every so often some of the surrounding nations threatened the peace of Judah and Israel.

V. 10. "Then Asa went out against him and they sat the battle in array in the valley of Zephathah at Mareshah." Eventually trial comes to each nation and to each individual. This is God's way of strengthening our lives. Trial makes us strong only if we have the courage and trust of Asa. Asa faced his difficulties realistically. He did not wait for Zerah to come upon him; he went out to meet him. When the trials of life confront us we had better face them with courage. Running away destroys our morale, and timidity never wins any battle.

V. 11. "And Asa cried unto the Lord his God, and said, Lord, it is nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power: help us, O Lord our God; for we rest on thee, and in thy name go we against this multitude. O Lord, thou are our God; let not man prevail against thee." It is of no avail that we call upon God, unless at the same time we are willing to do everything we can in the face of overwhelming odds.

V. 12. "So the Lord smote the Ethiopians before Asa, and before Judah; and the Ethiopians fled." While the world insists that self-reliance is the root of all success the Bible maintains that a wholesome distrust of one's power is better. This means that no matter how abundant our resources, they are powerful only if God gives us strength.

Wit and Wisdom

Mary was spending the afternoon looking at some Bible pictures in her Christmas gift book. Presently she remarked, "It says, 'Lot was told to take his wife and children and flee,' but I can't find a flea anywhere."

Discussion Questions on S.S. Lesson

1. To what extent should the church enter into the affairs of the state for political and moral improvement?
2. How account for Asa's good character in spite of a poor family inheritance and adverse circumstances? What lesson is here for us?
3. Before God can be given his rightful place in our hearts what are some of the things that must be abolished?
4. Explain how Asa's great trial made him strong. How do trials strengthen us?
5. What is involved in trusting God?

Clericus says: "When the heart is turned toward God it seeks to be at peace with the world. The greatest need of the world is a turning to God by individuals and by nations."

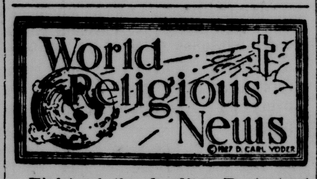

LESSON PRAYER: "When a thing is right we would proceed with all our strength and courage as if the fight depended upon us and then in our utmost effort we would depend upon God for the needed added power."

THROUGH LANDS OF THE BIBLE by H. V. Morton; Dodd, Mead and Company, is an informative, adventurous and inspiring account of the author's experiences through the lands of the Bible. His accounts of out-of-the-way places such as the Monastery of St. Catherine, the Oasis of Siwa and the Coptic Monasteries in Egypt are of special interest since they reveal in some instances the first modern account of daily life in these strongholds of primitive Christianity. The book contains in addition twenty-five illustrations and two maps.

Rev. Wright Union Service Speaker

The Sunday evening vesper services are held each Sunday evening during July and August at Liberty park, beginning at 8 o'clock. Loud speaker equipment makes it easy for everybody to hear even though many stay in their cars. Next Sunday evening the First Methodist church will be in charge. The Charles Wesley and the senior choirs will sing. Mrs. A. H. Bratten and Mrs. C. D. Demand will sing a duet offertory. Rev. Quincy R. Wright, will deliver the message, using as the theme of the message, "What We Most Need." These services are sponsored by the Ministerial Alliance of Sedalia and the offerings from the meetings are used to defray the expense of the Hall of Religion at the State Fair.

World Religious News

Eight of the leading Protestant churches in Argentina have formed a Confederation, a movement which is regarded to be the most important step taken in church cooperation during the past twenty years. The denominations represented were Methodist, Episcopal, Waldensian, Mennonite, Scots Presbyterian, Disciples of Christ, Evangelical Union of South America, Christian and Missionary Alliance, and the French Evangelical Church.

Dr. Rufus Jones, chairman, and Clarence Pickett, executive secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, were awarded the annual $10,000 Bok prize for outstanding service in Philadelphia. The two Quakers were cited for directing Friends' refugee and non-combatant aid throughout the world. Only twice during the past eighteen years has the award been given for religious activity.

A "bookmobile" carrying a traveling library to Indian reservations is a new feature of the interdenominational work of American Protestantism in the government Indian school at Flandreau, S. D. This is one of six federal Indian schools in which religious activities are carried on by the Committee on Indian Work of the interdemonational Home Missions Councils. The committee, which represents 23 national churches, was organized to unify and enlarge the work of those Communions among American Indians.

The Temple of Religion at the World's Fair in New York City will have a $250,000 concert organ constructed on classical principles, "the latest development in the reform movement in organbuilding in this country," according to announcement by William Church Osborn, president of the temple's directors. The instrument will combine the classical principles of construction, permitting the proper interpretation of the older music of the great composers, with additional features enabling the organist to play effectively the more modern and romantic works. The organ is the gift of John W. Hausserman, Jr., American composer and patron of music and art.

The Better Way

Which Way?

There are two ways to account for some people having more than others. The one way is seen in those nations that think they do not have their share of necessities. By this policy an effort is made to take from some and give to others.

The net result of this process is a general downward level of living standards.

The other way prevalent in progressive countries is that of improving one's condition, being spurred on by the success of others. The fact that some one else has a better home or a better car indicates that others have an opportunity to achieve the same position. Success by some means that success for others is possible. In this country we call that "opportunity" and it is one of our most cherished possessions.

The ambition to achieve and to produce and not to tear down what some one else has produced is the mainspring of American progress.

Our Preacher Says

Present suffering is not enjoyable, but life would be worth little without it. The difference between iron and steel is fire, but steel is worth all it costs. Iron if it could talk would say that its suffering when in the furnace was painful but when it discovers itself a mainspring in a watch it rejoices. Though the aspect of suffering is hard, the prospect is hopeful and the retrospect will start a song if we are called "according to His purpose" in suffering.

Home Education

Recently we had the privilege of studying a happy home and we found these important facts: the family lived a mile from an industrial town so that every member of the family found some work they could do; in the evening the home tasks were so divided that the farm work of 65 acres was done, and all having a part in making the place a real home gave zest and interest in the home life. The parents were pals to the children, working with them in a happy mood and planning for good times after the chores were done. The parents made a large place for religion in the home, taking the whole family to the Sunday services in which all took some part. They took their religion seriously and worked out in a practical fashion in their every day life the Christian principles evolved from their understanding of the church's text book, the Bible. The children were taught that they were God's stewards and so the family lived out a program of partnership. This story may seem idealistic but it really happened here.

Night Auto Accidents Often Due To Deficiency Of Vitamin A

This is the second of eight stories on vitamins and what they mean to health.

From time to time research has added vastly to our knowledge of the various vitamins. Since 1910 when the word "vitamins" was first coined, our information concerning such substances has steadily increased.

We thought at first that vitamin A was some single specific substance, but the experts now tell us that it has been definitely established that there are at least five substances which produce the same response in the body as does vitamin A itself. These are, in addition to vitamin A, three forms of carotene, known as alpha, beta and gamma carotene, and another substance called cryptoxanthin.

These substances, all of which are found in plants, are known as precursors of vitamin A. That is to say, when these substances are taken into the animal body, a compound forms in the body which is recognized as vitamin A. It is a mixture of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen chemically. Apparently different animals are able to form different amounts of vitamin A out of the precursors, depending on the nature of the animal and the precursor that is given.

While a complete deficiency of vitamin A results in the inflammation of the eyes that has already been described, one of the chief symptoms of vitamin A deficiency is called night blindness.

Human beings with night blindness see well in the daytime but cannot see well in the dark. It has been argued that a number of accidents to drivers of automobiles result from a lack of vitamin A in the diet and, therefore, to the fact that they suffer from night blindness. While, of course, there is some evidence in this regard, it is not yet considered as proved.

It is also established that vitamin A is an aid toward building resistance of the body to infection in cases in which this resistance has been lowered because of a deficiency of vitamin A. This does not mean, however, that vitamin A will prevent colds or influenza, nor does it mean that the taking of excess amounts of vitamin A will prevent other cases of infection.

While there has been shown to be some relationship between the taking of vitamins and the formation of kidney stones, there is nothing conclusive as yet to indicate that the taking of enough vitamin A will prevent formation of stones in the kidney.

NEXT: Vitamin B—Children need it for growth.

Delivery of the first of the BC-2 basic combat planes to the air corps was recently made. The planes are low-winged, all-metal, two-seated jobs. There is one fixed machine gun in front and one flexible gun mounted in the rear cockpit.

On the domestic lines of the United States alone 110,840 flights were scheduled and 103,939 or 95.36 per cent were completed.

One of the great safety features of the B-17B bomber is that it can fly and maintain its four engines—a factor which practically eliminates the possibility of forced landings due to engine failure.

At the end of 1938 there were 345 airplanes in operation on the scheduled airlines, and these aircraft consumed 45,310,192 gallons of gasoline and 829,870 gallons of oil.

The upper berth on sleeper planes, contrary to the general view held by trevelers, is the quieter and has an edge on the lower berths for smoothness.

The estimated cost of maintaining highway partols in the United State is $23,000,000.

Famed Eiffel Tower Weathers All Storms

FOR 50 years a storm of criticism has raged around the Eiffel Tower, famous Paris landmark. Even before its construction began, critics labeled it "Tower of Babel," and a "frightful, odious nightmare." Today it has been termed unsafe, out of keeping with its surroundings, and petitions for its removal have been circulated.

But the old tower, reaching 1000 feet skyward, takes criticism as well as it withstands the ravages of time and weather.

Built in 1889 as the central attraction of the French International Exposition, the tower is exceeded in height only by the Empire State building (1248 feet) and the Chrysler building (1040 feet). It weighs 15,400,000 pounds, is composed of 12,000 steel plates held together by 2,500,000 rivets.

Approximately 17,000,000 persons have "climbed" the tower. Elevators now carry visitors to landings on each of the three platforms, but in the early years of the tower's history the climb was made on foot. Visitors pay most of the handsome revenue the tower brings the French government, and advertising rental now increases its annual earnings. The tower paid for itself — 7,800,000 francs—in two years.

The 50th anniversary of the completion of the Eiffel Tower is commemorated on the French red-violet stamp above.

Child Longs To Escape Into "Free" Adulthood

By Olive Roberts Barton

"When I grow up," says Bobby, "I am going to have a lot of money and buy a whole candy store."

"And when I get to be a lady," says Betty, "I'm going to do exactly as I please, stay up all night and never take a bath or practice!"

"Say, you kids have got something there," says Max. "I only have to wait six years and then I'll be twenty-one. Whoopee! What a circus I'm going to have, without one single thing to worry about."

And this is the way youngsters think, most of them, about the years ahead when the manacles are unlocked and they are free.

Why do little girls love to play house and treat their dollies as the spirit moves them? Why do small boys play at being firemen, soldiers, aviators and such? Because their imaginations are running ahead of childhood and peopling their world with adult (and never childish) attributes and privileges. Peter Pan has little company.

It should be a matter of more common knowledge that children feel the disadvantages of being children. They are happy enough about it, I must say, when the reins do not restrict too cruelly. Just the same, they do better than we would do if we had to walk a chalk line for twenty-four hours a day, every day.

I suppose that if we took a child from among a million other children, and put him on the usual routine, all his friends and fellow citizens being allowed to run wild, this one would soon protest. But as it happens most children are in the same boat.

It is hard, therefore, for the mother, who is trying to regulate her child, and train him as a child should be trained, when the other boys and girls in the neighborhood are not so regimented. The child keenly observes his cronies to see how they are taking it, this irksome burden of being young and subject to orders Neighborhood custom plays a big part in the way any child looks at life.

Merchants To Get Back To Schedule

Meet Brookfield Merchants At Liberty Park Sunday

The Sedalia Merchants will get back on their season's schedule Sunday afternoon when they meet the Brookfield Merchants on the Liberty Park diamond. The game will be called promptly at 2:30 o'clock.

The Brookfield aggregation has defeated such ball clubs as the Kansas City Firemen, Elmer Panthers, Sugar Creek, Higginsville, and several other strong semi-pro clubs in Kansas City.

Pitching for the Brookfield team will be either Hill or Bonta with Ross behind the plate.

Manager Vincent Seigel announced Gene Horner will start the game against the opponents. Horner recently returned from Louisiana where he is under contract with a minor league baseball club, but is home for a rest.

Sullivan will work in the relief roll for this game. Simon will catch for the Sedalia team.

Nine Team Mates Then—Nine Friends Now

While the nation celebrated the 100th anniversary of baseball recently, California, Mo., had its own diamond festivities. The nine youngsters who formed the Brush Creek baseball team got together for a reunion. As they appear in both pictures the players and the men they became are: front row, left to right, John Kaiser, Henry Dearing, Florence Wise and J. E. Steiner. Standing, left to right, S. E. Lawson, L. G. Comer, Robert Steiner, W. F. Bower and Charles Eicher. All but Robert Steiner, who lives in Kansas City, are now residents of California and its vicinity.

Gabby Hartnett Plays In 1,700th Major League Game

BOSTON, July 21.—(AP)—Big, red-faced Gabby Hartnett, baseball's 'ol man river, rolled on through his 1700th major league game Monday.

Seventeen years and three months ago, almost to the day, the Chicago Cubs opened their season at Cincinnati—and the announcer bellowed "ladeez and gentlemen, the batteries for today's game: "Alexander will pitch, Hartnett will catch"....thus game Gabby to the Cubs and the National League.

The big Irishman was behind the plate again, catching for the club he now manages against Boston's Bees. Crouching behind the batter, ready to rifle a throw to second with his great arm, fighting for every decision, Gabby could look back through the years and see:

That first spring camp at Catalina Island. A tiny, blonde girl paddled in the shallow waters of Avalon Bay. Since then she has won two Olympic diving championships, retired from competition. She is Georgia Coleman.

That glamorous golden era of sports which produced such figures as Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jack Dempsey, Bobby Jones. Out of the picture they are now, while Gabby, grayer of hair, bigger of girth, and nearing his 39th birthday, keeps battling on.

Chicago White Sox Win 15 Of Last 19 Games

Pirates Jump To Fourth Place In National League

By The Associated Press

Wonder what kind of super-ethyl gas Jimmy Dykes is using in that White Sox machine of his?

The Chicagoans have won 15 of their last 19 games, have risen from the depths of fifth place to a challenging position in what is left of the American league race, and are just three and one-half games back of the runner-up Boston Red Sox.

Until two days ago the Sox hadn't been able to shut out an opponent but now they are boasting about a pair of whitewashing jobs. The second consecutive one came yesterday, and the Red Sox were the victims by a 4-0 score as Thornton Lee turned in a nine-hit job, backed up by four double plays.

Included in the Chicago upswing since the first of the month is a sweep of the St. Louis series, two out of three over Cleveland, a clean sweep of the St. Louis series, two out of three over Cleveland, a clean sweep of three games with Detroit, a lost series to Philadelphia, two straight victories over Washington and last the four-out-of-five triumph over the Red Sox.

However, all that leaves them still something short of the Yankees, who are at it again. The champions took No. 8 in a row from the St. Louis Browns by 2-1 yesterday behind Red Ruffing's four-hit pitching, his 13th win of the year.

Bobby Estalella helped Washington to an 8-7 victory and a sweep of the series over the Detroit Tigers when he banged a home run in the eighth with a mate aboard. Four-base blows by Hank Greenberg, Earl Averill and Roy Cullenbine couldn't match, in effectiveness, the Estalella round-tripper.

In the other American league tussle, Mel Harder of Cleveland had to pitch himself out of a lot of trouble before he came up with a 3-2 decision over the stubborn Philadelphia Athletics.

Two Games in National

The National league had only two games to offer but both were important in the general scheme of things.

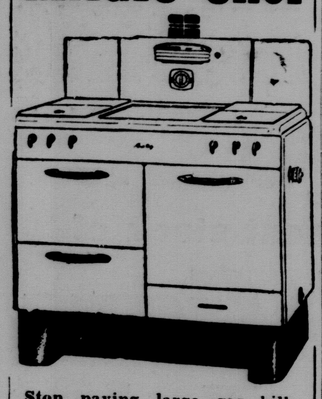

The Pittsburgh Pirates jumped from sixth to fourth place by virtue of their 8-4 victory over the battered Giants. That shoved the New Yorkers down to sixth place, just a game and a half out of seventh.

Elbie Fletcher of the Pirates homered in the seventh with two on base. The defeat was the New Yorkers' sixth straight, their longest losing streak of the campaign.

The Boston Bees, humming merrily along with seven wins in 10 games since the all-star contest, offered an unbeatable combination in stopping the Cubs again, this time by 2-1.

Swim in Pure Water

The laboratory Technician at Fitzgibbon Hospital at Marshall says concerning the Marshall Pool:

"I have examined the water weekly for bacteriological examinations. Each test has shown this water to contain far less bacteria than is usually encountered in good swimming pool water. From a bacteriological standpoint, this water would meet the requirements of good drinking water."

The Marshall pool is modern in every respect with the latest type filters which help to insure pure water at all times.

FOUND KRUGON TO DO EXACTLY AS CLAIMED

Lauds Merits of Laxative-Tonic In Giving Her Proper Elimination; Feeling Best In Many Years.

"No one but those who have suffered as I have can understand just how much KruGon has meant to me," said Mrs. Ida Baderdeen, 835 South Kansas St., Springfield, Missouri. "Faulty elimination had taken its toll with poisonous impurities settling in my joints and muscles throughout my body causing me miserable suffering. My hands and legs would cramp terribly and become so stiff I could hardly use them at all. My ankles and hands swelled badly too. Irregular bladder action was a constant disturbance forcing me up at all hours of the night, back pains were with me constantly and I was in a general run-down condition. Everywhere I turned for relief brought only failure but once I began taking KruGon I was shown what a medicine of merit could do."

"This laxative-tonic formula gave me results I had thought impossible," continued Mrs. Baderdeen. "It was not long until the clogged toxic impurities began leaving my body through natural elimination. Those dreadful aches and pains, stiffness and soreness have also been relieved. I get restful, strength-giving sleep each night without any disturbances and am only too glad to tell others of my own experience with this KruGon remedy."

KruGon is sold by McFarland and Robinson Drug Co., 104 W. Main St., this city, and by the leading druggists in surrounding towns.

Polish Soldier Is Killed Near Danzig Village

Tension Between The Free City And Poland Increased

By Alvin J. Steinkopf

FREE CITY OF DANZIG, July 20—(AP)—The killing of a Polish soldier near the Danzig frontier village of Postelau this forenoon suddenly increased tension between the free city and Poland.

Poles charged that the Polish soldier, Vitold Budziewicz, was shot by a Danzig border official on Polish soil.

Free city authorities said the Danzig customs officer, Max Stein, had fired in self defense.

Officials told widely differing stories of the incident which created great excitement at the office of the Polish commissioner in Danzig.

The account of authorities of the Nazified Danzig government was that Stein while patrolling near the Polish-Danzig frontier saw a man on a bicycle riding toward him from Poland with a rifle slung over his shoulders.

At the border, Danzigers said, the man dismounted, raised the rifle to his shoulder and released the safety catch as he aimed at the Danzig official.

Claim Self Defense

Stein asserted he shot the Pole in self defense.

Danzig authorities said they were not certain the Pole was dead, but the Polish commissioner's office reported Budziewicz died a few minutes after he collapsed at the frontier.

The Polish version was that a Danzig customs officer and two men in Danzig storm troopers' uniforms approached the border and without warning shot Budziewicz who was several yards within the Polish side.

Poles described the incident as "inexcusable provocation."

The Polish commissioner, Marian Chodacki, conferred with Danzig Senate officials while both sides still were receiving reports from the scene of the shooting. On the free city district's southern frontier.

As the incident occurred, the Nazi-controlled senate was preparing for conscription of men and wealth and taking further measures to meet emergencies which might arise from the Nazi campaign to reunite the free city with Germany.

Senators worked on a decree which would give sweeping authority for requiring all citizens to serve the state and for the use of any private property in defense of the community.

The free city government already has authority under a decree to conscript men for its enlarged police force, which has been increased to 4,000 men on active duty.

Defense organizations already have commandeered some trucks and automobiles for public duty.

Not Ask Recall Of Dickinson

LANSING, Mich., July 20—(AP)—John B. Corliss, Jr., of Detroit, wrote Governor Luren D. Dickinson today that he would withdraw petitions seeking the recall of the 80-year-old executive.

"You state," Corlis's letter to the governor said, "that you would be glad to sigh the recall petition, which I can only construe to mean that you admit your conduct has not been altogether becoming the high office you now fill.

"On the other hand, your honest execution of the official duties and your competent administration of state affairs I believe deserves only praise."

In announcing his plans for the circulation of the petitions Corliss had said they would contain no specific charges, but would contain general allegations of "conduct unbecoming the chief executive of Michigan."

In today's letter advising he would "refrain from circulating" the petitions, Corliss told the governor his "only offense" was "your preachments upon domestic sins, your moralizing opinions, and your parental usurpation of the right to direct the people in the way of righteousness according to your own belief."

This, he added, "is the office of a saint, not a governor."

Corliss' letter of withdrawal was released just a few minutes before Attorney General Thomas Read declared the petitions were not in proper form and would not justify the calling of a special recall election.

Plenty To Study Before Deciding on Complaint

O'Neill, commander of the local post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars stated this afternoon that there would be several of the post members work Saturday evening, placing flags to direct traffic to the location of the V.F.W. picnic to be given Sunday The scheduled picnic will be on Muddy creek, at a location on the Gault farm. The route from Main street and Grand avenue, will be marked by small white flags near each intersection, to the picnic grounds, going west from Main and Grand. Mr. O'Neill stated that a few of the veterans would stay on the grounds Saturday night to do some "fishin'" and "frogging". If lucky there will be an addition to what the picnickers bring out. All veterans and their families are welcome.

Abrupt Halt Comes To Audit At Court House

State Auditor Orders Cessation Due To Cut

The audit of the Pettis county court house books and records, about half completed, came to an abrupt conclusion with the announcement yesterday that the entire staff of thirty field auditors assigned to checking county records will be dismissed Saturday by the state auditor, Forrest Smith, because of appropriation cuts in his department.

The two auditors, assigned to this county, Grover Hayes, who has been here since January 1, and James Hazenstab, who joined him a few weeks ago, were notified to cease their work here, and that effective Saturday morning their services were no longer required by the state.

The audits of the assessor, coroner and the circuit clerk's office up to January 1 when Bryan Howe took office, and the county clerk have been partially completed. The auditors expected to take all other offices in turn and both men had moved their families to Sedalia expecting to be here several months.

Smith said earlier this week that between 60 and 70 employes would be fired and the salaries of others would be cut because of the reductions Gov. Lloyd C. Stark made in his biennial funds.

Smith said the entire program of county audits which last year disclosed shortages of about $1,000,000 will have to be abandoned, with only special audits made in counties where they appear to be needed.

Dismissal of the county auditors—drawing $150 a month each will cut $4,500 off Smith's monthly payroll.

Many Relatives Claim Share Of Patterson Estate

Settlement of the estate of the late John F. Patterson, Houstonia business man, who died last January at the age of 85 years, leaving no will, is bringing a large number of distant relatives into the picture, all of whom will receive nothing if nephews, believed to be living, are located, and prove their claim.

Mr. Patterson's estate was appraised at $33,800.90, divided into $3,450 real estate and $30,350.90, personal property.

At the first filing in the probate court there were shown to be sixteen cousins. It was necessary to determine who were first, second, or third cousins, once removed or otherwise. The number grew until instead of sixteen there were seventy-three cousins.

The matter seemed to be settled with that number of cousins, and about the time the inheritance tax appraiser was ready to file his tax report for payment of $395, it was learned that Mr. Patterson had a brother, who had a daughter. An investigation revealed this daughter was deceased at the time of her uncle's death, but that she had a son. Naturally that son would be her heir, his grandfather's heir, and the latter, being Mr. Patterson's brother, would have inherited his brother's estate.

As yet unconfirmed is a report that the deceased daughter of Mr. Patterson's brother had two sons, and if both are living and are located the entire estate will be divided between them, and all other heirs, such as cousins, are out of the picture.

If the estate is divided between two nephews the inheritance tax will be $750 instead of the $395 it would be if divided among a greater number of heirs.

PHOENIX, Ariz., July 20—(AP)—Imposition of the death sentence on Robert Burgunder, 22-year-old murderer, was deferred today until July 28. Time for sentence originally was set for next Monday.

Counsel asked additional time to prepare a motion for a new trial.

To Ask Opinion Of The Voters On Neutrality

Issue Be Discussed In Speeches The Next Few Months

WASHINGTON, July 20—(AP)—A neutrality measure will be evolved out of hundreds of talks which members of Congress have with voters of their home states during the next few months.

Regardless of whether President Roosevelt goes campaigning for his brand of neutrality, or whether Senators Borah (R-Idaho) and Johnson (R-Calif.) go out arguing against it, most politicians say the determining factor will be the soundings of political sentiment taken during the recess of Congress.

Threats of a backstorming neutrality debate, reminiscent of that which the Idahoan and Californian helped take to the country in their 1919 battle against the league of nations, are minimized in several quarters.

Borah and Johnson are 20 years older than they were when the "batalion of death" flourished. And President Roosevelt, though deeply interested in the neutrality measure, has given no sign that he expects his administration to be measured solely by whether he wins or loses this one battle.

The fact that Borah attended the White House conference on the neutrality bill Tuesday night is, in itself, a sign that feelings are less intense than they were in that historic battle over the league.

Maneuverings Led To Fight

In the maneuverings that led into the league fight, President Wilson invited the Foreign Relations committee to have dinner with him and discuss the issue. Borah sent his regrets, saying in his note that he wished to be bound by no confidences and:

"I simply find myself in such disagreement with him (President Wilson), and feel so intensely concerning the matter, that I cannot do otherwise than candidly advise him of that fact."

It is quite likely that the neutrality issue will be discussed, pro and con, in speeches during the next few months. Both Mr. Roosevelt and the opposing senators are likely to find opportunities to put their views into words. Many think, however, that this will be more in the nature of a calm discussion than of heated debate.

Face Debate Calmly

Few politicians expect those of either side to spend the next few months whipping up passions for and against this one measure—which has, generally speaking, one chief point at issue. That point is whether arms should be sold to warring nations on a cash and carry basis.

These men argue that there should, and undoubtedly will, be plenty of discussion, but that with the state of world affairs what it is, the citizens of the United States should not be worked up to fever pitch over their part in a future war.

Arrest Man For Hickory Sheriff

George Fox, about 50, who lives at Twentieth street and Harrison avenue, was arrested by the local police Thursday night for Sheriff Charlie Benedict of Hickory County on charges of giving several bad checks in that territory.

Sheriff Benedict, who came to return Fox to Hermitage, the county seat, said that Fox had been representing himself as an employee of Harris Cohen, a junk dealer here.

Fox would buy some junk and give a check for the amount with the name of Cohen signed to the check according to the officer.

Under the name he would write "by George Fox," the sheriff said.

Cohen told local police that Fox had not worked for him for some time.

Longwood Man Is Bruised By Auto

Carl Davis of Longwood, received a bruised elbow and several scratches Thursday night when he was knocked down by a car driven by Leon Benedict, 416 East Walnut street, at the intersection of Main and Kentucky.

Davis, who is about 50 years old, was treated by a doctor at the police station last night. Benedict said that Davis walked in front of his car from behind another automobile, and that he did not see him.

Hanging In Effigy Curbed

Indicats That Few WPA Workers Left Their Jobs

By The Associated Press

Police prevented WPA workers and sympathizers in New York from hanging two congressmen in effigy, a scheduled part of a nation-wide protest demonstration which drew an undetermined percentage of workers off WPA projects.

Some 2,000 demonstrators, as estimated by leaders of the 450 police who shepherded them in New York's Columbus Circle, had gathered at the call of the Workers' Alliance. Police stopped carpenters at work on a gallows for two stuffed figures representing Rep. Woodrum (D-Va.) and Rep. Taber (R-NY), of the House committee which investigated WPA.

Louis F. Schilling, deputy chief inspector, said the mock hanging "was liable to cause trouble."

To this, President David Lassner of the alliance said in Washington:

"We wouldn't want to do anything that would cause trouble."

Meanwhile, incomplete reports indicated few workers left their jobs to demonstrate, as asked by the alliance, against new relief restrictions.

In Los Angeles, an alliance spokesman said his tally showed 7,500 walked off 35 projects. Other reports, however, used such figures as 40 or 50 in Fort Worth, Texas; 17 at Columbus, Ohio and 81 at Milwaukee, Wis.

Pleads Against Cut

Senator Maloney (D-Conn.) predicted at Washington there would be "severe suffering" after September 1 when existing WPA wage differentials are to be altered and a 30-day payless vacation is to begin for relief workers who have been on the rolls 18 months.

He urged that senators appeal to WPA authorities not to cut wages of workers in the north and west.

At Washington, D. C., President David Lasser of the alliance said it would be two days before "we get the whole picture" of how many took part.

The demonstration was called as a protest against the new relief act's requirement that all on WPA put in a 130-hour month and that persons on the rolls 18 months be furloughed to make room for new ones. The 130-hour requirement replaced the prevailing wage system.

Lt. Col. Brehon B. Somervell, WPA administrator in New York City, said a check had indicated no more than 4,000 were going out there. Sam Weisman, alliance secretary, put the figure at more than 40,000.

In small towns, Lasser said, demonstrations probably will be confined to the lunch hour or after work but in larger cities, he said, workers "may be off an hour or two."

More than 400 police assigned to Columbus circle in New York kept from a demonstration program the hanging in effigy of Representatives Woodrum (D-Va) and Taber (R-NY), who were members of the House committee which investigated WPA prior to passage of the new relief act.

Seals Self In Steel Chamber

Scientist Believes 'Sub' Victims Had No Severe Pain

LONDON, July 20—(AP)—Prof. J. B. S. Haldane, who sealed himself in a steel chamber for 14½ hours as a human guinea pig, said today his experiments indicated that victims of the submarine Thetis disaster drifted into death without severe pain.

The story of the noted scientist's tests was given to a special tribunal investigating the tragedy.

(The Thetis was lost June 1 in a practice dive in Liverpool Bay. Of the 103 men aboard, only four escaped. Of the 99 dead, three were known to have lost their lives in attempts to leave the vessel with artificial lungs.)

Haldane declared of his research:

"I believe the men suffered absolutely no severe pain. They may have had headaches. The sensation of panting which you get is very definitely unpleasant but it is not the intolerable feeling of bursting of lungs which you get if you are, for example, buried alive or if you are breathing through very serious resistance. No one can say it is pleasant but it could not be called torture."

A group of relatives of submarine victims, dressed in deep mourning, was among the spectators when Haldane gave his hypothesis of the last hours of the doomed.

There was a long huy when the professor said they would have a sensation something akin to the feeling after strenuous physical exertion. The men gradually would feel less and less, he said.

Haldane's experiments attempted to reproduce conditions in the Thetis the morning after she failed to rise from her test dive.

The scientist spent 14½ hours in an airtight steel cylinder having a window from which his reactions were observed by Capt. H. P. K. Oram, one of the four Thetis survivors.

Like Escape Chamber

The cylinder was about six and a half feet in diameter and six feet high and resembled the escape chamber from which Capt. Oram and the other survivors escaped from the submarine with Davis Lung apparatus.

Haldane attempted to use a Davis Lung upon being freed from the test cylinder.

"For a minute or two I breathed quite calmly and happily," he said. "Then I was seized with vomiting. I do not say that I had to take the apparatus off but I did take it off x x x

"I think it an extremely plausable hypothesis that the man attempting to escape from the Thetis had such symptoms as these.

"I think it is possible that one of the men who were drowned (attempting to escape) may have vomited and torn off his mouthpiece for that reason.

"My suggestion would be that the correct course if men are attempting to escape with the Davis apparatus from very foul atmosphere that before going into the escape chamber they should breathe oxygen for about 45 minutes either from the apparatus itself or from a 'manifold.'"

Haldane told of two additional experiments he made. including one with four friends, former soldiers fighting for Republican Spain, who joined him inside the chamber.

In one of the experiments he endeavored to test the efficacy of attempting to pump fresh air into a sunken submarine.

Of the four companions in the mass test, the professor said one felt well at the end of the long imprisonment; two had such severe headaches that efficiency was dubious; one was ill; and Haldane's own reaction was repeated.

Defense Levels Attack Against Aaron Sapiro

Witness Quotes Browder During Bridges Hearing

SAN FRANCISCO, July 20.—(AP)—Defense attorneys at the Harry Bridges deportation hearing levelled a renewed attack on Aaron Sapiro, government witness who testified Bridges once boasted he was "running the Communist party."

The dapper, sleek-haired Sapiro, an attorney himself, was a wary witness on cross-examination, but in his direct testimony yesterday he went further than anyone yet produced at the department of labor hearing in describing the Australian-born labor leader.

Sapiro quoted Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist party in the United States, as calling Bridges "one of the hardest members we have to handle in the party."

Support Half The Party

He said Browder told him, in an interview in August, 1936, at Los Angeles, that Bridges, as head of the Longshoremen's union, provided jobs enough for Communists to "support half the party" on the Pacific Coast.

"A great deal of actual money and support, and powerful support, comes through Bridges," Sapiro quoted Browder, "and we don't like to fight with him, but I will give orders that he line up and that they make a united front as far as the shipowners are concerned."

Sapiro's interview with Browder concerned differences between Bridges and Harry Lundeberg, head of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, now an AFL union and long at loggerheads with Bridges' CIO maritime organizations. Sapiro represented Lundebery and the Sailors' union in various legal actions.

Not Advised of Explosion

On cross-examination, the attorney witness said he "had not heard" he had been expelled from the Sailors' union, in which he held honorary membership. (The union publication recently announced the attorney's expulsion "for 99 years.)"

It was in connection with the Sailors' union differences that Bridges' asserted boast about running the Communist party was made, the witness testified. He told of an interview here in June, 1936, with Bridges.

"Mr. Bridges and I differed on some things," he said. "* * * he told me he was running the maritime affairs on the Pacific Coast, and he was running the Communist party."

Defense attorneys lost no time, when their turn came, to elicit admissions from Sapiro that he was once indicted in Chicago with Al Capone and 31 others in an investigation of an asserted dry-cleaning "racket," and that he was disbarred from federal court practice after his acquittal two years ago on charges of jury-fixing.

Protests In Vain

The witness protested vigorously, but vainly, when Defense Attorney Richard Gladstein read into the record a letter from Captain of Detectives John J. Keegan of Portland, written to Sapiro, making a new mention of Stanley Morton "Larry" Doyle, anti-radical American Legion leader, subpoenaed to appear here.

In the letter, Keegan quoted Doyle as saying, "Sapiro can go to hell with his affidavits, as I have a copy of it. * * * My purpose * * * is solely to deport Bridges. * * *."

The affidavit referred to, Gladstein brought out, was one made by a Beverly Hills client of Sapiro concerning his former Communist party affiliation.

House Orders A Full Inquiry Into The NLRB

Resolution For Investigation Is Voted 252 to 135

WASHINGTON, July 20—(AP)—The house ordered today a sweeping investigation of the national labor relations board.

A resolution creating a five-man investigating committee was put through by an almost solid phalanx of Republicans and a large group of Democrats.

Speaker Bankhead announced the roll call vote for the resolution was 252 to 135.

The measure, by Representative Smith (D-Va), calls for an inquiry to determine whether a new board to administer the Wagner labor act should be created and what effect the board may have had on employer and labor relations.

Sponsors claimed the inquiry was necessary to meet "tremendous pressure" from all parts of the country while opponents asked that action be deferred until labor committees of both the senate and house could conclude their hearings on Wagner act amendments and make recommendations of their own.

The vote on final approval came shortly after a test vote of 268 to 131 had disclosed a majority of representatives were for the investigation.

Rep. Wood, (D-Mo), labor committeeman, said the resolution was not intended to provide an investigation into alleged abuses by the board but was "for the purpose of embarrassing the National Labor Relations Board and interfering with its administration of the law."

He called it a "reflection on the labor committee of this house."

Rep. Anderson (D-Mo) wanted to know whether it was true that "members of congress are treated with disrespect by legislative committees." and Rep. Dunn (D-Pa), a member of the committee, shouted a long "no," while Chairman Norton of the labor group threw up her hands in mock horror.

Anderson called attention of the house to several cases in various parts of the nation which he termed "incidents of the ruthless abandon with which the labor board in its actions and decisions has distorted the evidence so as to make its decisions seem logical."

"I have always maintained these tactics are a matter of policy with the labor board despite all precedent and basic law to the contrary notwithstanding," Anderson said.

Listing several board decisions and statements, Anderson declared:

"I believe anyone can see from the facts themselves that the chairman of the labor board distorts them to fit his own ideas of what they should be to substantiate any view or opinion he may or may not have. * * * This is the character and policy of the board."

He charged the "vaguest type of irresponsibie hearsay evidence" is admitted into the board's record "when favorable to the CIO."

Will Attempt To Revive Old Time Camp Meetings

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Mo., July 21—(AP)—An attempt to revive the pioneer institution of the old time camp meeting will be made here Sunday by a non-sectarian religious group under direction of the Rev. J. R. Armstrong, veteran minister.

The organization has leased 60 acres of land near here for the camp meetings which will continue for one month, and a number of ministers will take their places on the pulpit as their turn comes, and preach the gospel in any manner they see fit.

Functions of this kind were held during the pioneer stages of the South Missouri Ozarks and were characterized by large attendance and tremendous religious fervor. Older residents recall crowds running into several thousands.

A variation from the meetings of 50 years or more ago is seen in the plans for accommodating the crowds. Rooms, tents, and cots will be available, provided by the church organizations. Many of those attending, however, in the belief of the leader, "will bring old straw ticks and sleep under the stars."

Chief Barrier To Early End For Congress

WASHINGTON, July 20—(AP)—The administration dropped the term "self-liquidating" today from the title of its $2,800,000,000 lending program bill.

Majority Leader Barkley of the senate, who announced the alteration, said the purpose was to get away from possible "picayunish, petty-fogish objections" to the label, "self-liquidating."

There has been no change, said Barkley, in the administration's fundamental proposal for putting money loaned under the program into recoverable assets.

But Senator Danaher, of Connecticut, voicing a view expressed in some Republican quarters, contended that the administration had "abandoned all pretext that this is a self-liquidating proposition."

This contention, Barkley rejoined was "silly."

The majority leader said the new name of the legislation was "works financing act" whereas the old name was "self-liquidating projects act."

He appeared at a closed session of the senate banking committee to explain provisions of the measure, which has recently undergone revision in an effort of leaders to meet some objections. One section cut out in the remodeled measure was that calling for a permanent revolving fund. Under the new plan money repaid on loans would be turned over to the treasury instead of being put aside for further lending.

Prompt Action Aim

By William B. Ardery

WASHINGTON, July 20—(AP)—Republican leaders joined Democratic chieftains today in seeking prompt action on President Roosevelt's $2,800,000,000 lending bill so that congress can go home soon—perhaps by July 29.

Senator McNary (R-Ore) advised Democratic Leader Barkley (D-Ky) that Republican senators would cooperate in any move for a quick showdown vote, even though most of them oppose the legislation. It was reported authoritatively that Representative Martin (R-Mass), house minority leader, had made a similar agreement.

Barrier To Adjournment

With the thorny neutrality issue definitely shelved for this session, the lending program remained as the chief barrier to speedy adjournment.

Mr. Roosevelt was disclosed to have agreed to expand the program to include additional authority for the RFC to insure business loans which hold a "reasonable prospect" of repayment.

Senator Mead (D-NY), author of legislation to provide government insurance of small loans, disclosed he was conferring with Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve board on a proposal authorizing the board to lend up to $270,000,000 to small business.

Plan Educational Drive

Mead talked yesterday with the president, Administrator Jesse Jones of the federal lending agency, and Chairman Emil Schram of the RFC. They said afterward that Mr. Roosevelt proposed an educational campaign to show banks and business men what the RFC can do in insuring loans.

Senator Barkley, author of the lending bill, made one concession to opponents agreeing to eliminate a provision calling for a permanent revolving fund. Under his proposal, money repaid on loans would be turned over to the treasury instead of being put aside for future re-lending.

Might Get Call Back

Although both Barkley and Senator Minton, Democratic whip, said they were "shooting at" adjournment by the end of next week, cloakroom conversations were dominated by talk of a special session to settle the neutrality question. Most well-informed senators held the belief that Mr. Roosevelt would call congress back at once if a new crisis developed in Europe.

The president and Secretary Hull had pleaded for immediate repeal of the arms embargo against warring nations, but agreed at a white house conference Tuesday night to postpone action until the next session.

Authors of proposals to restrict commerce with Japan, however, were hopeful of a vote before adjournment. Senator Pittman (D-Nev) has introduced a bill to authorize embargoes against Japanese goods, while Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) has called for abrogacommerce with Japan, after the tion of the 1911 treaty of amity and specified six months' notice..

This American Answer Is The Right Answer

It is a commonplace saying today that democracy is under attack all over the world. It is freely said that it is on trial for its life, and it is certainly clear that the German, Italian, and Russian state philosophies have condemned it as an antiquated relic in a world they believe to be inevitably stridink on to new techniques of public administration.

How best answer these attacks? By bitter words condemning in turn the systems and beliefs of others? Bl military alliances aimed at curbing them by force?

No. There i sonly one sure defense of democracy, at home and before the whole world, and that is a ringing and convincing demonstration that it works and that life is better when lived in the democratic way.

How answer the religious and minority persecutions abroad? By checking resolutely the growth of any such feelings here, and by achieving constantly broader freedom at home to worship God as one wills, and to hold against no man his race, his color, his external circumstances.

How answer the regimented labor of totalitarian countries, whose appointed-from-above leaders boast that they tolerate no labor disturbances to interrupt production? By showing that a free labor movement can accept responsibility, and that free employers can deal with it smoothly and justly.

How answer the reputed centralized efficiency of one-man countries? By showing that a government responsive to the people's will is still more efficient.

How answer the propaganda flooding in from totalitarian lands? By creating such achievements in this one that their sheer glory will be its own propaganda.

How answer the threat of aggression and military might? By calmly end effectively taking measures making our own land secure, and then observing good faith and justice toward all nations, cultivating peace and harmony with all. (Those last are George Washington's words.)

In short, how answer threats to democracy? By achieving more and better democracy. How answer threats to freedom? By achieving more freedom, and such conditions as will show the world this way is best.

That is why it is good to read the annual report of the Civil Liberties Union, titled "The Bill of Rights—150 Years After." This careful survey shows in detail "unprecedented support of our constitutional guarantees," "a more favorable interpretation by the courts in general of civil rights," mob violence at a new low, "extaordinary little interference" with public meetings, and a decline of censorship of movies, radio, theater, and literature.

Keep up the good work, America! That is the right answer, and the only answer, to the challenge.

A convention of women's clubs adopted the word "homemaker" to replace "housewife."

Until recent times, it was a common belief that lightning hurled down thunderbolts.

Spring and deep well waters usually are well filtered, but contain large quantities of dissolved salts.

A law forbids German cyclists to ride two abreast in busy streets and makes riding with only one hand on the handlebars a punishable offense.

High Romance

Good old romance! It isn't dead yet, not by a jugfull!

Ladies sighed over the romantic Byron, who wrote:

Farewell! if ever fondest prayer
For other's weal avail'd on high,
Mine will not all be lost in air,
But waft thy name beyond the sky.

That was Byron on paper—in the flesh he was somewhat lesas than constant.

Not so his modern successor, A. Oscar Wiggenjost of Omaha. What Byron poeticized about, Wiggenjost did. He hired an airplane sky-writer to write literally on the clouds, in letters a half mile high, a message to Wiggenjost's estranged wife, Helen.

The message, less poetic but more practical than Byron's, was simply "Wiggie Loves Helen."

Thus far, Helen is reported cold to Wiggie's Gargantuan appeal. But then, we don't recall how Byron made out in that particular case, either.

Government Profits

One gets so accustomed to the government these days as a sort of universal and cosmic bag-holder for all the losing propositions an ingenious country can toss into its lap, that it is a pleasure to record a venture which netted the government a cool million or more in net profits.

This was the philatelic agency of the Postoffice Department, which reports that it sold $1,312,016 worth of stamps in the year ended June 30.

These were not stamps for which the government had to provide postal service in return. They were sold to stamp collectors who, for some reason that must remain forever inscrutable to non-collectors, were willing to pay well for them and never use them.

Such sales are practically 100 per cent profit for the government. In his own way Postmaster General Jim Farley is evidently doing his best to stamp out the deficit by keeping cool—and collected.

The gripping organs of the cat's claw creeper grow in all directions, and sway to and fro in an ever-widening arc, until they come in contact with nearby tree trunks. The claws enter the bark, develop roots, and then send out new, clawed creepers.

This Week In Missouri History

GOVERNOR ZENON TRUDEAU
An Outstanding Empire-Builder of the Spanish Regime in Missouri

Before the United States purchased the Louisiana territory no governor stationed in what is now Missouri did more to build up a Spanish empire in America than Zenon Trudeau.

His term as lieutenant-governor of Upper Louisiana began on July 21, 1792, one hundred and forty-seven years ago this week. During his first months at St. Louis he learned that British traders were building forts in Spanish territory on the upper Missouri, and in order to drive them out and to expand the influence of Missouri traders he encouraged the organization of the Missouri Company. Through this organization he proposed to exploit new Indian tribes on the upper Missouri, discover a route to the Pacific ocean, and build forts as a buffer against British and Russian aggression into the rich provinces of California and Mexico. As a government agency for defense and exploration the company only fairly succeeded, for although it construced two forts and captured one that had been built by the British, none of the three existed long. As a business venture the company failed completely, for because of bad management and Indian trouble three expeditions, costing the stockholders more than $200,000, were lost.

An empire builder and not a provincial official, Truleau did not limit his interests to the northwest. In order to control the troublesome Osage Indians he helped arrange with Auguste Chouteau for the biulding of Fort Carondelet in 1794-1795. This fort, evidently built near Halley's Bluffs in the present Vernon County, was the most western fort built in Missouri during the Spanish regime.

In his capacity as a colonizer, however, Trudeau did his greatest work. As early as 1770 his predecessors had developed a plan for allowing colonists to settle in Spanish territory. Under this general arrangement the governor had the power to confer grants varying in size from 200 to 1000 arpents to actual settlers, although in special cases he was allowed to make larger grants. Trudeau was impressed with the military and economic importance of immigration and not only accepted the plan but a direct effort to get outstanding American frontier leaders to settle in Spanish Louisiana. The great pioneer, Daniel Boone, and hundreds of Americans were courteously received, accepting Spanish citizenship and generous grants of land from this noted governor.

Governor Trudeau objected to the requirement that all colonists must accept the Catholic religion. Possibly he might have been tinctured with the French irreligion of that time, but at least he seems to have administered the religious oath in a most perfunctory manner. He was under a strict obligation to expel all Protestant ministers, but John Clark, a Methodist preacher, periodically visited the region now included in Jefferson County and was never materially interferred with.

Under his progressive colonizing and commercial policies, business became more active. St. Louis took on a new air of prosperity and new towns and communities were founded. Not until the closing years of the nineteenth century, almost a hundred years later, did the wave of immigration so carefully nurtured by Trudeau subside.

Benon Trudeau, who with a policy encouraging immigration, trade, exploration, and fortification to protect the region against invasion, became one of the most progressive governors of Upper Louisiana, was born in New Orleans on November 28, 1748. A man with a high sense of patriotism and unquestioned personal integrity, Trudeau was popular among the people and held the respect of his superiors. When he was offered retirement with a pension in 1797 he refused because of the war with England. He was succeeded as lieutenant-governor by Charles Dehault Delassus on August 29, 1799. Trudeau died in St. Charles Parish, Louisiana, soon after 1803.

Financial Condition Of Sedalia

Is Described By Chairman Sumners Of City Council

The chairman of the finance committee of the city council, E. C. Sumners, has prepared a written statement on the financial condition of the city, drawing conclusions from the statement of the financial condition of the city as published in the Democrat and Capital Sunday morning.

The statement, read at the council meeting Monday night by S. J. Timborious, in the absence of Mr. Sumners, is as follows:

"Gentlemen:

"I trust each of you read and studied the statement of the financial condition of the city of Sedalia which appeared yesterday in the Democrat and Capital and was for the period from January 1st, 1939, to and including June 30th, 1939.

Spending Cited

"You will note the collections for the six months amounted to $84,464.53 and the expenses were $96,590.21 which shows we spent $12,125.68 more than we took in for the first half of the year. This condition cannot continue during the last half of the year if we hope to stay within our budget which is set at $178,968.00. However, I wish to comment on a few items which this statement shows.

"The gasoline judgments which were obtained against the city October 1st, 1936, in the total amount of $3,264.63 with interest at 6 per cent have now been paid in full and releases obtained from each company interested.

"The bonds on the incinerator plant dated July 2nd, 1919, of $35,000.00 with interest at 5 per cent are now paid in full and therefore do not appear on this statement.

"A total of $13,784.41 was paid the City Light and Traction Company for street lighting during the past twelve months, and there is nothing delinquent.

Fire Hydrant Rentals

"The sum of $40,700.00 has been paid the Sedalia Water Company for Fire Hydrant Rentals since June 30th, 1938 and there is nothing delinquent.

"The bonded indebtedness as at June 30th, 1939, is $97,000.00, and the interest on each bond issue is paid as the same become due.

"In closing I wish to again bring before you the fact that we overspent our income for the first six months in the amount of $12,125.68 and as you all know, this cannot continue. I wish to ask that each department head do their best to reduce expenses in their department and also the various boards be requested to cooperate in making the next six months statement show that we did stay within our revenue.

"I wish to thank each and all of you in advance for the cooperation I feel sure we will receive.

KANSAS CITY, July 17.—(AP)—Indictment of Boss Tom Pendergast for the $9,500,000 Missouri fire insurance rate case settlement scandal was suggested today to Jackson County's grand jury by the St. Louis grand jury which indicted R. Emmet O'Malley, Pendergast henchman and former state insurance superintendent.

The St. Louis grand jury report was forwarded to Herley S. Daily, foreman of the Jackson County grand jury. Both Pendergast and O'Malley are serving Leavenworth penitentiary sentences for dodging income taxes on money paid them to compromise the risk case. They pleaded guilty.

Daily said he would discuss the St. Louis request with other jurors. A copy of the letter was received by County Prosecutor W. W. Graves. It was accompanied by a communication from Franklin Miller, St. Louis circuit attorney, who offered to aid in prosecuting Pendergast for aiding in bringing about the compromise. The St. Louis indictment charged O'Malley with bribery.

The letter to Graves said the St. Louis jury "found there is no cause for prosecution of" Pendergast in St. Louis. It charged the bribe of $62,000 was paid O'Malley in St. Louis and said Pendergast "under the statutes must be charged" as an accessory in Jackson County.

It named A. L. McCormack, St. Louis insurance executive, as "the bribe giver" and said it took no action against him as he is an indispensable witness against O'Malley and has testified as such before the grand jury and will so testify at the trial of cases against the two men mentioned."

The federal government charged Pendergast got $315,000 and O'Malley $62,500 for compromising the risk case, and dodged taxes on the funds.

An Allotment For Wild Life

WASHINGTON, July 17.—(AP)—Secretary Ickes announced today he had apportioned $1,380,000 for development of wild life resources during the year ending next June 30.

States must indicate within 60 days whether they desire to avail themselves on the fund or forfeit their allotments.

The money was allotted among states on a basis of acreage and hunting licenses sold and must be used to pay 75 per cent of the cost of developing wild life resources. States pay the remaining 25 per cent.

To participate in the government's program, states must have a conservation law and a prohibition against diverting proceeds from hunting licenses for purposes other than administration of state game departments.

Missouri's allotment was $31,396.

Kills Her Father For Breaking Promise

DANVILLE, Ill., July 17—(AP)—Because he violated a peace pledge made two weeks ago at the request of his family, Andrew Heath, 39, was dead today, slain, police said, by a blast from a shotgun wielded by his 16-year-old daughter, Alta.

Lieut. Leo Bireline said the girl admitted she fired the fatal shot after telling her father:

"Well, Daddy, this is what I said I was going to do."

Bireline said the girl, held without formal charge, told him Heath, a brickyard worker, came home drunk and "started abusing me and the other children.

Enraged, Alta seized the shotgun, Bireline related, but Heath took the weapon away from her. Later, while her father was standing in the yard, Alta took the gun, stepped out on the porch and shot him, the officer said.

Heath was placed under a peace bond recently at the request of his wife, Mildred, who complained he threatened her. Alta told Bireline her father frequently mistreated her and the other children.

Petitions For Armory Given To Council

3,660 Signers Ask Special Election On Bond Issue

Carl G. Schrader, chairman of the committee to secure the names made the presentations to the mayor. He said that personally he hoped it would be built under a PWA program rather than a WPA program. It was his wish also, he said, that it belong to the city and be rented to the state, rather than be constructed with the aid of state money, then becoming state property.

A committee from the Civic Round Table headed by its chairman, Joseph L. Rosenthal, attended a regular city council meeting Monday night to present petitions, bearing the names of 3660 signers, requesting the mayor and city council to call a special election to vote bonds for the construction of an armory.

Mr. Schrader recommended that the mayor appoint a committee of council members and other citizens to investigate the proposition before calling the election.

Use Best Judgment

LeRoy Bryson said he knew the council members would give due consideration to the names and request for an election, and use their best judgment in the matter.

Chairman Rosenthal said, in closing the Round Table's remarks that they realized their duty was not finished when the signatures of more than 3500 names were secured, as requested by the council. They know, he said, that they must continue until the election is over, and endeavor to have every one of the petition signers cast a vote, if the election is called.

Members of the Round Table committee attending the meeting were: Mr. Rosenthal, Mr. Schrader, Ellsworth Green, Tom Yount, Harry Holman and Miss Anna Marie Morseman.

Constable Fred Ream captured one of the youths, Thomas Naylor, 17, of Sherman, Tex., who fell asleep in the stolen car while he was supposed to be standing guard during the burglary of the filling station. Naylor was armed with a pistol taken from the Lawrence county jail at the time of their escape.

All three were taken to the McDonald county jail at Pineville where Tracy charged them with burglary and larceny and with bringing a stolen car into the county. Lawrence county authorities came here this morning and Tracy said the prisoners may be released to them later.

The trio told the prosecutor that they hitch-hiked to Joplin from Mount Vernon yesterday, arriving late in the afternoon. They decided, according to their story, to steal a car in Joplin and go to Texas.

Fire Truck Hits Car Of Chief

The fire chief's car collided with a fire truck, driven by the chief's brother, Tuesday afternoon as both were on their way to a grass blaze.

Neither Chief John G. Lueck nor the firemen, including driver Al Lueck, were injured in the accident, which happened at the intersection of Hancock street and Broadway.

Chief Lueck was following the East Sedalia truck on its way to the fire, while the other truck was going to the same fire by a different route. When they reached the intersection, the truck Lueck was behind turned east onto Broadway.

As the chief followed it, his car was sideswiped by the West Sedalia truck, which was coming east on Broadway. The truck, after sideswiping Lueck, ran across two lawns before stopping near the sidewalk. It was slighly damaged and the fenders on Lueck's car were mashed.

Chief Lueck said that had he kept going at full speed he would never have collided with the truck, but that he instinctively slowed down when he heard the siren.

Both fire trucks were coming from another grass fire at Main street and Quincy avenue, that had happened only six minutes before, when they were called to the second blaze.

The truck was repaired by the firemen. It had run across the lawns of T. D. Robertson and D. J. Connell.

Safety Talk By G. T. Callender

Tells of Program For Prevention Of Shops Accidents

Organized shop operation and an organized safety program are one and the same, and neither is successful without the other, G. T. Callender, superintendent of the Sedalia Missouri Pacific shops, said in an address before the recent convention of the Safety Section of the Association of American Railroads at Cincinnati. He added that the elimination of accident hazards and uncafe practices produce shop efficiency, harmony and good feeling.

The Missouri Pacific was also represented by Superintendent of Safety C. F. Larson, chairman of the committee of Train Accidents, and chairman of the Committee on Nominations.

The Missouri Pacific Magazine in a report on the address of Mr. Callender quotes:

"We have set up a program of accident prevention—as the foundation for all safety work—under which immediate action is taken to eliminate unsafe practices and to eliminate potential accidents," explained Mr. Callender in his address. "And we are confident that each time we remove a hazard we benefit not only the employe and his family, but also the employer."

Report For First Aid

On suffering even the slightest injury, our Sedalia shopmen report immediately to a first aid station, at which a nurse is in attendance, Mr. Callender explained, adding that he returns to his supervisor with the nurse's report of his injury, and thereupon a committee comprising the injured man, his supervisor and his general foreman is automatically established to thoroughly analyze the accident. The committee's findings with respect to the accident, and how a repetition of the same accident can be avoided, is then added to the nurse's report.

"For the information of employes," he continued, "a unique safety chart is provided in all departments. This consists of a large picture of a shop workman on a blackboard. All injuries of the month are shown on this figure, along with the date of the accident. The idea is, of course, to keep the blackboard clean, or the man entirely free from accidents.

"At the beginning of each month a meeting is held with all supervisors and employes present. Each accident, minor or otherwise, placed against the blackboard man during the previous month is reviewed to show the condition of one individual had he been subjected to all the accidents occurring in a month. This has stimulated a great deal of interest."

Weekly meetings of the Safety Committee, which consists of the chairmen of the various craft organizations, have proven of great value, Mr. Callender added. At these meetings, all items shown on standard safety cards are discussed, and a man is selected to go over the entire premises the balance of the day and make a safety card report of his findings to the general foreman. Safety rules are read at the committee meetings, and, in addition, safety rules are regularly posted in conspicuous places, where the men see them as they check in and out each day.

Corn Tumbles Nearly Three Cents

CHICAGO, July 20.—(AP)—Heavy selling broke out in the grain pits today, tumbling corn values approximately 3 cents a bushel to the lowest level in more than six years and dropping wheat more than 2 cents to lows unequalled since late last year.

Most of the selling apparently came as a result of early fractional declines which uncovered a large lumber of stop loss orders. The prospective large domestic corn crop, start of the spring wheat movement and establishment of all-time record lows in wheat futures at Liverpool were bearish factors in the trade.

Corn closed 2⅛ to 2⅞ cents lower than yesterday, July 39⅞c, September 41c to 41⅛c; wheat 1⅞ to 2⅜ cent lower, July 63⅞c, September 64½c; oats ¾ to 1⅛ cent down.

Youths In Jail Escape Caught

Trio Who Slugged Jailer Caught At Southwest City

SOUTHWEST CITY, Mo., July 20—(AP)—Three youths who slugged Jailer Henry Brown and escaped from the Lawrence county jail at Mount Vernon Tuesday night, were captured here at 2 o'clock this morning when, officers said, they attempted to break into a filling station to obtain gasoline for a stolen car.

The stolen car they were driving was identified, Prosecuting Attorney W. G. Tracy said, as having been stolen last night in Joplin from in front of the home of Municipal Judge Robert L. Mitchell.

Constable Fred Ream captured one of the youths, Thomas Naylor, 17, of Sherman, Tex., who fell asleep in the stolen car while he was supposed to be standing guard during the burglary of the filling station. Naylor was armed with a pistol taken from the Lawrence county jail at the time of their escape.

The other two youths, Warren Urban, 17, and Leonard Rassman, 19, of St. Louis, fled and were fired upon four times by Ream. They escaped and Ream enlisted the aid of Marshall Bill Kent and several citizens who caught the St. Louis youths about daylight a mile south of town.

All three were taken to the McDonald county jail at Pineville where Tracy charged them with burglary and larceny and with bringing a stolen car into the county. Lawrence county authorities came here this morning and Tracy said the prisoners may be released to them later.

The trio told the prosecutor that they hitch-hiked to Joplin from Mount Vernon yesterday, arriving late in the afternoon. They decided, according to their story, to steal a car in Joplin and go to Texas.

Fire Truck Hits Car Of Chief

The fire chief's car collided with a fire truck, driven by the chief's brother, Tuesday afternoon as both were on their way to a grass blaze.

Neither Chief John G. Lueck nor the firemen, including driver Al Lueck, were injured in the accident, which happened at the intersection of Hancock street and Broadway.

Chief Lueck was following the East Sedalia truck on its way to the fire, while the other truck was going to the same fire by a different route. When they reached the intersection, tne truck Lueck was behind turned east onto Broadway.

As the chief followed it, his car was sideswiped by the West Sedalia truck, which was coming east on Broadway. The truck, after sideswiping Lueck, ran across two lawns before stopping near the sidewalk. It was slighly damaged and the fenders on Lueck's car were mashed.

Chief Lueck said that had he kept going at full speed he would never have collided with the truck, but that he instinctively slowed down when he heard the siren.

Both fire trucks were coming from another grass fire at Main street and Quincy avenue, that had happened only six minutes before, when they were called to the second blaze.

The truck was repaired by the firemen. It had run across the lawns of T. D. Robertson and D. J. Connell.

Safety Talk By G. T. Callender

Tells of Program For Prevention Of Shops Accidents

Organized shop operation and an organized safety program are one and the same, and neither is successful without the other, G. T. Callender, superintendent of the Sedalia Missouri Pacific shops, said in an address before the recent convention of the Safety Section of the Association of American Railroads at Cincinnati. He added that the elimination of accident hazards and uncafe practices produce shop efficiency, harmony and good feeling.

The Missouri Pacific was also represented by Superintendent of Safety C. F. Larson, chairman of the committee of Train Accidents, and chairman of the Committee on Nominations.

The Missouri Pacific Magazine in a report on the address of Mr. Callender quotes:

"We have set up a program of accident prevention—as the foundation for all safety work—under which immediate action is taken to eliminate unsafe practices and to eliminate potential accidents," explained Mr. Callender in his address. "And we are confident that each time we remove a hazard we benefit not only the employe and his family, but also the employer."

Report For First Aid

On suffering even the slightest injury, our Sedalia shopmen report immediately to a first aid station, at which a nurse is in attendance, Mr. Callender explained, adding that he returns to his supervisor with the nurse's report of his injury, and thereupon a committee comprising the injured man, his supervisor and his general foreman is automatically established to thoroughly analyze the accident. The committee's findings with respect to the accident, and how a repetition of the same accident can be avoided, is then added to the nurse's report.

"For the information of employes," he continued, "a unique safety chart is provided in all departments. This consists of a large picture of a shop workman on a blackboard. All injuries of the month are shown on this figure, along with the date of the accident. The idea is, of course, to keep the blackboard clean, or the man entirely free from accidents.

"At the beginning of each month a meeting is held with all supervisors and employes present. Each accident, minor or otherwise, placed against the blackboard man during the previous month is reviewed to show the condition of one individual had he been subjected to all the accidents occurring in a month. This has stimulated a great deal of interest."

Weekly meetings of the Safety Committee, which consists of the chairmen of the various craft organizations, have proven of great value, Mr. Callender added. At these meetings, all items shown on standard safety cards are discussed, and a man is selected to go over the entire premises the balance of the day and make a safety card report of his findings to the general foreman. Safety rules are read at the committee meetings, and, in addition, safety rules are regularly posted in conspicuous places, where the men see them as they check in and out each day.

Corn Tumbles Nearly Three Cents

CHICAGO, July 20.—(AP)—Heavy selling broke out in the grain pits today, tumbling corn values approximately 3 cents a bushel to the lowest level in more than six years and dropping wheat more than 2 cents to lows unequalled since late last year.

Most of the selling apparently came as a result of early fractional declines which uncovered a large lumber of stop loss orders. The prospective large domestic corn crop, start of the spring wheat movement and establishment of all-time record lows in wheat futures at Liverpool were bearish factors in the trade.

Corn closed 2⅛ to 2⅞ cents lower than yesterday, July 39⅞c, September 41c to 41¼c; wheat 1⅞ to 2⅜ cent lower, July 63⅞c, September 64½c; oats ¾ to 1⅛ cent down.

Governor Will Fight on Liquor

LANSING, Mich., July 17.—(AP)—Governor Luren D. Dickinson sought today to employ his account of gay drinking parties at the recent national conference of governors as the springboard for a campaign to return prohibition to Michigan.

The 80-year-old Republican governor, teaching his adult Sunday school class at the little center Eaton Methodist church yesterday, said he hoped his charges would start a nation-wide reform movement.

Dickinson, a "dry" leader since his youth, said in an interview today that he believed abuses of the liquor laws had awakened a sentiment for prohibition that required only an active leadership. He said he would issue a formal invitation shortly to churches of all denominations to join him in a new fight to outlaw liquor from Michigan by constitutional amendment.

He emphasized that his statement should not be interpreted as an indication that he would run for election as governor on a prohibition platform.

"I am deliberately keeping my mind open on the subject of being a candidate," the aged party leader declared. "It is my observation that a governor who plans to run for office again sometimes permits that fact color his acts. I am only human, so I am making no plans."

When Dickinson ascended to the governorship last March upon the death of Frank D. Fitzgerald he made an unqualified statement that he would not seek reelection.

The governor indicated he might call a conference to outline plans for a prohibition campaign if the churches' response give him hope for success.

Meanwhile, he said, he plans to do everything in his power to have the Michigan Liquor Control Commission close rural drinking spots. "Something must be done about those roadhouses, operating in inadequately policed areas," he said. "They attract young people to unwholesome surroundings."

Glad 'Hanging' In Good Company

WASHINGTON, July 17—(AP)—Representative Short (R-Mo.) believes a group from the Workers' Alliance had every right to hang him in effigy at Springfield, Mo.

"While I want the support of every one I can get," he said, "I distinctly want it understood my philosophy of government and that of the Workers Alliance do not coincide.

"I was glad to be hanged with such good company as Representative Woodrum (D-Va.) and Representative Taber (R-N.Y.), outstanding members of the House. I am thankful I was not to have been hanged between two thieves."

Declaring he believed in freedom of speech and assembly, Short added:

"They have a perfect right to do all the hanging they please as long as it is en effigy. But I don't want to be a real one."

No engagement will be made now, but if weather permits, I will be here on the fourth Sunday."

Large Barn Of Dr. Yancey Burns

A large hay barn, corn crib and small sheds at a home owned by Dr. E. F. Yancey in Otterville, together with their contents, were destroyed by fire about midnight Tuesday night.

It is believed the blaze may have started from spontaneous combustion, as the barn was filled with hay, 114 bales being new hay. If that was the cause of the conflagration occurred within twenty-four hours after the new hay had been put in the barn, which is unusual, particularly as the hay had been well matured before being stored.

Besides the new hay there were several hundred bales of oat straw and last year's timothy, and there was a small amount of corn in the crib.

Dr. and Mrs. Yancey were notified of the fire about midnight and with C. R. Bothwell drove to Otterville, returning about 2 o'clock.

There was no chance to save the barn or contents, the only thing that could be done was to protect nearby homes and buildings.

The barn and contents were insured.

Stocks of Grain Same As In 1938

COLUMBIA, Mo., July 17.—Stocks of corn, oats and wheat on Missouri farms July 1 were about the same as a year ago, but more than twice as large as the 10-year average stocks, according to a report made public by the United States department of agriculture marketing service here today. The large stocks, the report said, are due to relatively large crops produced during the last two years in relation to the number of livestock. Disappearance since April 1 has been smaller than average.

Corn stocks, 34,055,000 bushels, are 90 per cent above the ten-year average and equal 33 per cent of the corn harvested for grain in 1938. Of wheat on farms, 2,528,000 bushels, is likewise 90 per cent above the 10year average, and the stock of oats, 8,208,000 bushels, is 110 per cent above the ten-year average.

R. M. Gorrell Farm Excells

An average yield of 33 bushels per acre from 71 acres of wheat on the farm of R. M. Gorrell, Sedalia, Route 3, is one of several high yields that have been reported in Pettis county this year. Records kept on the Gorrell farm show an average of 22 bushels to the acre over a 10 year period.

Mr. Gorrell says that he intends to start plowing immediately to prepare ground for wheat this fall, as he believes early plowing to be a necessary practice in obtaining consistently high yields.

Like many other Pettis county farmers, Mr. Gorrell has found that summer plowing for wheat, as well as for fall sown barley and rye, is a paying practice. Plowing early and then taking care to have a well prepared seedbed before drilling gives a solid seedbed that results in less freezing out the following winter, says assistant county agent W. J. Murphy.

The rough surface obtained by plowing also causes absorption of more of the summer and early fall rainfall and there is no growth of weeds to make the ground hard and dry. The absence of weeds also prevents a tie up of the plant nutrients that weeds would draw from the soil, so that these nutrients are left available for the crop that is seeded.

More Building This Year Than During 1938

1939 building permits issued to date in the city of Sedalia show a total sum of $100,000 has been spent for building projects, equal to the money spent during the entire 12 months of 1938. The $100,000 represents 140 permits issued through the office of the city engineer.

During the past week, one was issued for the remodeling of the Bischsel building on the southwest corner of Fourth and Ohio, the construction to cost approximately $15,000. The contract went to the Dean construction company; the electrical work to Wollett Electric company.

Another permit issued this week was the construction of a building for a radio station on Broadway and Highway 65, at a cost of $5,000. Dean Construction company also has this contract and the Wollet company the electric work.

A permit was issued to Tom Ware for the construction of two frame, modern houses on Sixth and Massachusetts, each to cost $7,000.

Benefits To Rail Workers

Available To The Jobless Under The Insurance Act

Railroad workers who are unemployed and who earned $150 or more in 1938 in railroad work may now get benefits under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act which went into active operation July 1, the Railroad Retirement Board pointed out today. Such unemployed workers should register and file a claim for the benefits at the last railroad for which they worked or, if located at some distance away from their last job, at the nearest office of a railroad.

William A. Murphy, regional director of the Railroad Retirement Board for the Kansas City region, points out that the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act is a federal act establishing a national system of unemployment insurance for railroad workers. The act is administered by the Railroad Retirement Board which also administers the Railroad Retirement Act. The Kansas City region includes the following area: Missouri, Oklahoma (except tip of panhandle), Arkansas (except southwestern corner), Kansas (except extreme west), eastern half of Nebraska, southwest corner of Iowa, and a small piece of southern South Dakota. District offices in the Kansas City region are located in St. Louis, Missouri; Little Rock, Arkansas; Kansas City, Missouri; Wichita, Kansas; and Omaha, Nebraska.

H. O. Brenner is in charge of the district office in St. Louis, Mo., and T. E. Keating is the local representative of the St. Louis district office in Sedalia, Mo. During the first ten days of claim operations approximately 5,000 claims were received in the Kansas City regional office.

The plan of operation worked out in cooperation with railroad employers and labor organizations provides for prompt handling of claims and payment of benefits. All the unemployed applicant has to do is to go to the foreman on his last job who, if not himself authorized to accept registrations, will be able immediately to put the applicant in touch with the person who is so authorized.

The importance of registration by the worker when he becomes unemployed or as soon thereafter as possible lies in the fact that his days of unemployment cannot count either toward his "waiting period" or as days of unemployment for which he will receive benefits until he registers and properly files his claim.

Benefits under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act are paid for each day over seven that an eligible railroad worker is unemployed in any fifteen consecutive days. This means that if a worker is totally unemployed for the fifteen days he can draw eight days of benefits. If he should be unemployed eight days, he would get one day of benefit; if unemployed nine days, two days of benefit, and so on. The benefit rates vary from $1.75 to $3 per day, depending on the worker's earnings for 1938. Thus benefits in any fifteen-day period of total unemployment will range from $14 to $24. The most a totally unemployed worker can draw in any twelve-month period is eighty times his daily benefit rate or from $140 to $240, scaled according to what he earned in the railroad industry in 1938.

To be eligible for unemployment insurance benefits under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, an employee must meet the following requirements:

1. He must have earned $150 or more from a railroad or other employer covered by the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act during the calendar year 1938.

2. He must register and serve a waiting period of fifteen consecutive days in which there are at least eight days of unemployment.

3. He must not have become disqualified for benefits due to any of the causes specifically set forth in the act.

All further information with reference to eligibility or disqualifications for benefits will be provided to the worker at the time he registers.

Interrupts Wedding Feast of Man 60; Bride 16

NEW YORK, July 17—(AP)—A stone hurled through the window-pane of a third-floor apartment interrupted the wedding breakfast today of 60-year-old Carmelo Locapira and his 16-year-old bride after police and firemen checked a crowd of 100 shouting men and women who tried to break up their marriage ceremony last night.

An hour after the stone-throwing episode, while Locapira was still trying to calm his sobbing young wife, the former Torsilla Minichielli, a man Locapira identified as his first wife's brother raised a row outside their door.

The grey-haired bridegroom told police his brother-in-law, Joe Banacci, banged on the door and shouted at him to vacate the apartment, asserting that the furniture belonged to his late sister.

Neighbors called police. By the time six policemen arrived in radio cars the man disappeared. A crowd of 150 persons in front of the building vehemently argued the pros and cons of the marriage.

Locapira barricaded himself and his bride behind locked doors once more, tersely announcing:

"There'll be no honeymoon. Things are exciting enough already."

Neighbors objected to the match because of the disparity in age between the grey-haired Locapira and his pretty, dark-eyed bride, daughter of a janitor in a house owned by Locapira.

They waited in clusters last night until he emerged from his home to leave for the ceremony.

Locapira, a widower 18 months, listened in silence to their jeers, then he took to his heels, followed by the crowd in full cry.

The panic-stricken bridegroom was pursued into the Church of St. Anthony of Padua, where his bride and her parents were waiting, and was forced to run up to the altar for refuge. Screaming women halted at the church doors only long enough to tie handkerchiefs over their hair, then entered and continued to shout imprecations.

"Who gives consent to this girl's marriage to this man?"

Three times Torsilla's father boomed in answer, "I do."

Locapira and his bride, a grammar school student, were escorted home by police.

Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever Attacks Missouri

By Hugh J. Wylie

JEFFERSON CITY, July 15—(AP)—Dreaded Rocky Mountain spotted fever has crept into Missouri—believed unshackled from its long confinement in western states by modern transportation.

"At present it is nothing to be alarmed about," said Dr. Harry F. Parker, state health commissioner—but his department is taking precautions to check the highly lethal ailment even while state scientists squint down microscopes at ticks of all kinds looking for the "carrier."

They think the common "dog tick" responsible.

One Case Reported

Only one case has been reported to the department—that one from Sullivan county. Four cases, all in the counties along the Mississippi River, were reported in 1938.

But county and district health officers have been ordered to watch for indications of the illness.

"We want to be prepared should it start to spread," said Dr. Parker. "Fatalities in western states have been as high as 90 per cent."

The illness strikes during June, July and early August—the tick season.

Ticks On Cattle

How spotted fever broke out of its western boundaries is not definitely known, but Dr. Parker believes it was carried like many other "sectional diseases" through modern transportation methods—perhaps infected ticks on a truck load of cattle.

What precautionary measures can the average person take?

"Persons traveling through tick-infested areas should wear clothing which will prevent the insect from reaching the skin," Dr. Parker said. "Also watch closely for any ticks on the body and remove them immediately."

Mass immunization is used to prevent spread of the illness in the west, but the few Missouri cases do not warrant this preventative method, Dr. Parker said.

Red Blotches On Skins

"The best way we have of studying this and other diseases in the state," he declared, "is by receiving reports of all cases. Then we know whether it is spreading, how to prepare for it and its exact status."

Red blotches appearing on the skin, coupled with high temperatures and frequent pains, is a sign of spotted fever. It is similar in many ways to typhus fever.

"As I've said before," Dr. Parker added, "It's nothing to be alarmed about yet. But we have a lot of ticks in Missouri."
